Another Yacht Race.
France Worried, But Ready.
To Fly High.
Soul Searching Week.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

LEADING ALL THE WAY, Harold Vanderbilt and his American defender, the yacht Enterprise, yesterday won the second international race easily. Some serious accident, or a miracle, would be needed to give Lipton the victory, which millions of Americans heartily wish he might have.

FRANCE WORRIES about the German elections, threatening the stability of Hindenburg's government, and the era of what may be called "German submissiveness."

Hitler, the new power in Germany, advocates abrogation of treaties, with disregard of the Versailles agreement, and he preaches radical anti-Semitism.

The hope of the Conservatives in Germany and in France is that moderate German radicals will act with the Hindenburg party to prevent control by Hitler.

THE WISE FRENCH who look ahead, and were not taken by surprise in 1914, are probably not surprised now. It is not for nothing that they have accumulated two billion dollars in gold, and built the world's most powerful air fleet, that within 24 hours' notice could strike destructively at every German city.

FOKKER HAS BUILT, secretly, an airplane with its motors in the wing. Intended for pursuit plane work, the construction will minimize air resistance.

And engineers, serious men, not dreamers, according to the "sportsman pilot," plan an automobile to fly high up in the atmosphere where no man could breathe, with air pressure reduced to almost nothing.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND FEET up there exists a very different atmosphere from the heavy air down here, so different that the atmosphere itself could be used for fuel.

The flying crew would manufacture breathing material for their own lungs and for the engine, neither of which could use the upper air. A speed of 3,000 miles an hour is actually suggested, which is called reasonable, with air resistance almost entirely lacking. One thousand miles an hour, the sun's apparent speed, and around the world in 25 hours, would be fast enough.

IF WALL STREET interests you, as a stock owner or a ticker watcher, this is a week for soul-searching. In this week of September, a year ago, we all suddenly discovered that things that go up can also come down.

After a continuous three-year advance, prices began to crumble. And how they did crumble! Broken hearts and bank accounts can tell. "How art thou fallen, Lucifer," applies to some of those high priced suckers. Look at them now.

YESTERDAY, MONEY was cheap, yet Wall Street was depressed. Copper sold at a new low rate, "call money" was only 2 per cent. Prices of commodities are dropping in all directions.

The British, with a Labor government, are determined to keep up wages. If we have brains enough to do the same, that will help the return of prosperity.

Even the dull minded can understand that prosperity depends on what the masses of the people have to spend. Cut their wages, and you delay return of good times. They are the buyers.

SLIGHT THINGS cause important decisions. An aged Greek philosopher fell, leaving his class. He killed himself because he was humiliated.

A man with a duel ahead of him in the morning killed himself, dreading the duel.

Thousands of young men kill themselves when refused by some young woman, although dozens of others are much like her.

IN NEW YORK, a man, unemployed and discouraged, woke up to find that his shoes had been stolen. He tried three times to kill himself.

He could not apply for jobs with feet bare.

CONGRESSMAN HAMILTON FISH, JR., earnest young American and chairman of the Communist Investigation Committee, was annoyed when Communists sang "Solidarity Forever," and said to them:

"If you don't like it here why don't you go back where you came from?"

That is not a sound economic argument. It would be better to say:

"If you don't like things here, change them legally, but only if you can get a majority to agree with you."

Patrick Henry, Washington, Jefferson and others didn't like conditions in America, but they didn't go back "where they came from," fortunately.

Dissatisfaction is always useful when it is law abiding.

Senate Committee Chairman Blocks Statement; Denies Employment of Spies

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Senate Campaign Funds Committee denied Oscar E. Carlstrom, attorney general of Illinois, the privilege of presenting a statement in defense of "the honor and dignity of Ruth Hanna McCormick" today and returned forthwith to the main line of its inquiry.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman, opened the hearing with a statement denying that the committee had spied on private affairs or pilfered records from the files of Mrs. McCormick, who charged wire-tapping by committee operatives in a statement issued last night.

CHARGES SIDETRACKED

The charges and counter-charges of spying were then sidetracked and Chairman Nye called Mabel G. Reinecke, formerly collector of internal revenue, as a witness in regard to campaign expenses.

The Republican senatorial candidate and her advisors, Attorney General Carlstrom, officials of the Dannenberg detective agency, which Mrs. McCormick employed to "shadow" Senator Nye, and Charles O. Rundall, counsel for the Dannenbergs, were waiting when Chairman Nye, Senator Roscoe Patterson, of Missouri, and

RADIO 'DOCTOR' FOUND GUILTY AND PAROLED

Ordered to Cease Broadcast And Drop Medical Title; Did Not Possess License

Charles Russel Cox, self-styled chiropractor and osteopath, of Dormont, who, in radio addresses advocated dieting as a cure for diseases, was found guilty in Criminal Court today of practicing medicine without a license by a jury after a deliberation of 12 hours. He was paroled for six months.

The jury recommended the extreme mercy of the court. Judge William H. McNaugher told him to refrain from broadcasting and using the title "doctor."

NOT LICENSED

The court ruling restraining Cox from using the title "doctor" was made one of the conditions of the parole by Judge McNaugher on the request of Deputy Attorney General David Glick, who was acting on the advice of Dr. Irwin Metzger, chairman of the state board of Medical Education and Licensure.

The charges against Cox were brought by W. J. Hawes, of Greenville, an agent for the state board of the medical license bureau.

USED "DOCTOR" TITLE

It was the commonwealth's contention that Cox represented himself as a medical physician and cited the fact that he prefixed his name with "Doctor."

On the stand Cox admitted he used the title, but testified that he

Ex-Soldiers Sponsor Greeting To Publisher, With State And Civic Leaders Joining

Universal Service.

The welcome was inspired by the action of the French government in excluding the publisher from France because of his expose of the secret Anglo-French treaty.

Members of the welcoming delegation left the Battery in the excursion steamer Rock Mountain for quarantine. There a senatorial committee headed by Senator Robert F. Wagner boarded the Europa and, to the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" by the 22nd Regiment Band, formally welcomed the publisher.

HEARST LEAVES LINER

Through the courtesy of the federal government, which allowed the senatorial committee to board the Europa at quarantine, Mr. Hearst was permitted to disembark there and to return to the Battery on the delegation's boat.

Ceremonies aboard the liner were brief. They included a welcoming speech by Senator Wagner, and one by Louis Mann, the actor.

Other addresses were made aboard the excursion steamer, on which were several hundred persons, with senators, congressmen and veterans of the World War predominating.

PUBLISHER RESPONDS

Mr. Hearst, who had issued a formal statement aboard the liner, also responded briefly to the remarks of welcome aboard the excursion boat. He said:

"It is good to be home. It is good to be free.

"Freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of the press are such usual and ordinary things in this free country, that we Americans little appreciate

BLAZE GETS BEYOND CONTROL

Atlantic Refining Safety Men Forced to Call 11 City Companies to Help Fight

Fire was raging this afternoon in a battery of gasoline stills at the plant of the Atlantic Refining Company at Fifty-seventh and Butler streets.

Within a few minutes after the first alarm was sounded at 2:20 o'clock, second and third alarms called out 11 fire companies in addition to the refining company's forces, who were fighting what threatened to be a disastrous fire.

BEYOND CONTROL

The fire was believed to have started when a still boiled over. It quickly got beyond control of the company's fire fighting forces.

The fire was centralized in a corrugated pent house atop the building in which coal dust, used to fire the stills, is located.

Dense smoke and sheets of flame prevented firemen from throwing a stream of water on the roof.

SHEETS OF FLAME

Firemen at 3 o'clock were trying to confine the fire to the stills. A brisk wind was blowing the flames in sheets over the plant grounds, threatening to spread the burning area.

Police from downtown, Lawrenceville and Penn avenue districts were rushed to the scene, and fire lines were established to hold a crowd of spectators in safety zones. Traffic in Butler street was blocked by engines and lines of hose.

3D YACHT RACE HALTED BY FOG

ABOARD U. S. S. KANE, Off Newport, R. I., Sept. 16.—(INS.)—The third of the international yacht races between the defender Enterprise and the challenger Shamrock V. was officially called off today on account of the heavy fog and generally unfavorable weather.

The race committee instructed all boats at the starting line to return to port. The fog was so dense that two large yachts collided in the harbor but were only slightly damaged.

LIPTON REGRETS DELAY

Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of Shamrock V., aboard his private yacht Erin, was informed by the committee boat shortly after 11 a. m. this morning that the race had been postponed.

The Irishman expressed regret. He had been asking constantly as

Council Opens Way for New Terminal

Council today passed an ordinance for the widening and improvement of Eleventh street, first of a series of projects looking to a new Pennsylvania railroad terminal.

Eleventh street is to be widened to a 66-foot roadway with 10-foot sidewalks, and a new sewer built, all estimated to cost $180,000. Bids will be asked as soon as possible after the mayor signs the ordinance, it was said.

Woman Mystery Writer Marries

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Agatha Christie, noted woman detective story writer, was married last week to Max E. L. Mallowan, widely-known British Museum archaeologist.

The couple, whose marriage was revealed today, now are on the continent and later will go to Palestine, where Mr. Mallowan has been engaged in excavations for some time.

Plane Lost, Yancey Returns on Liner

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and two companions arrived here from Nassau today aboard the Munson liner Munargo. The plane in which they were completing a tour of Central and South America had been wrecked.

NOAH BEERY'S WIFE MISSING

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Mrs. Marguerite W. L. Beery, wife of Noah Beery, motion picture star, disappeared from the Beery home a week ago, the screen actor disclosed today.

For the last week Beery has been conducting a quiet search for his wife that has produced no results, he said. Beery said his wife had apparently driven away from the valley home in the automobile which she has been accustomed to drive. However, no one saw her leave, he said. Inquiries made of all friends and relatives of the missing woman have proved to no avail.

The actor said Mrs. Beery left no explanation. She had been ill for several months and, Beery said, he attributed the disappearance to her illness.

Beery declared he hoped she would return, as she did after leaving home several months ago, during a similar illness, but said his son, Noah, Jr., 17, had requested him to seek police aid. The actor added that he canvassed Mrs. Beery's friends but none could give him any information.

The Beerys were married at Boston in 1910. Two years ago, Mrs. Beery started a divorce action, but they were reconciled later.

ROBINS, CARDS OPEN SERIES

Associated Press.

With the Robins holding a slim advantage of one game over the second-place Cardinals, Brooklyn and St. Louis open an all-important three-game series at Ebbett's Field today—a series that may go a long way toward deciding the winner of the National League pennant race.

The Robins picked up a half-game yesterday, defeating the Reds, 13 to 5, while the Cards were idle and the Cubs were dividing a doubleheader with the Phillies.

	W.	L.	Pct.	Games Behind	To Play
Brooklyn	84	60	.583	...	10
St. Louis	82	60	.577	1	12
Chicago	82	61	.573	1½	11
New York	78	65	.545	5½	11

	Win.	Lose.
Brooklyn	.586	.579
St. Louis	.580	.573
Chicago	.576	.569
New York	.549	.542

Professor Killed In Father's Crash

CHARLEMONT, Mass., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Prof. Richard C Hay, a member of the faculty of the Tuck School of Finance at Dartmouth College, was crushed to death here today when an automobile, driven by his father, Gen. W. H. Hay, of New York City, turned over. The elder Hay was stunned. Prof. Hay's mother, the third member of the party, suffered a rib fracture and possible internal injuries.

Only Civil War Vet In Congress Failing

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Representative Charles M. Stedman, of North Carolina, who suffered an apoplectic stroke last week, has not responded to treatment. Physicians said today his condition was "decidedly unfavorable."

They declared, however, there was a "possibility" the 89-year-old Democrat, only surviving Civil War veteran in Congress, might recover.

Coach at Maryland Sued for $20,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—H. C. (Curly) Byrd, vice president of the University of Maryland and coach of the football team, today is a defendant in a $20,000 damage suit filed by Miss Minnie D. Haines. She charges Byrd struck her in the face and twisted her arms.

Film Star to Face Gem Theft Suspect

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Laura La Plante, motion picture star, was expected here today to press charges against Harry Rhode, a train porter, who is charged with having stolen $7,500 in jewels from her Pullman compartment recently.

THOMPSON CASE NEAR JURY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—His dealings with the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, a first cousin, during the absence of his father, J. V. Thompson, who was in Europe in 1904, were described today by Andrew Thompson, second son of the former coal baron, who is on trial for embezzlement by trustees.

The case was expected to go to the jury late today.

Mr. Thompson said that while his father was away he was given power of attorney and that he paid to the Princess $4,900 interest on the $98,000 loan his father had been given from the Princess' share of the estate of her father, John Niccolls.

Thompson said he signed the name of his father and his uncle.

DRY QUIZ URGED BY BROOKHART

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16. J. (INS.) — Senator Brookhart, (Rep.), of Iowa, announced today he favors a senatorial investigation of the practices of the entire prohibition enforcement system.

He said if the public charges of Maurice Campbell, former prohibition administrator for New York, against the administrative unit of the prohibition bureau, particularly his allegations against Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition when it was under jurisdiction of the Treasury Department, are true, "the public should know about it."

Tax Depends On Revenue, Says Reed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16. —(INS.)—The government must receive greater revenues or slash its expenditures during the remainder of the year if there is to be a continued reduction of taxes next year, Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, declared today.

He said he could not see how the one per cent special reduction on income taxes, authorized by Congress a year ago, could be continued on present revenues.

Council Urged to Provide 2 More Golf Courses

Two proposals for new municipal golf courses appeared in Council yesterday.

One was a suggestion that the city purchase the Stanton Heights Golf Club. The other was a petition asking creation of a course overlooking Washington boulevard, near the Leech Farm tuberculosis hospital.

A letter addressed to President of Council John S. Herron, from West S. Brown, brought the Stanton Heights proposal to the official attention of Council.

Mr. Brown wrote that the club, consisting of 150 acres on which there are a clubhouse and an 18-hole course, is valued by the owners at $540,000.

The petition for the Leech Farm course was sent to Councilman Robert Garland by H. H. Hunter, president of the Samuel W. Black Co. It was signed by between 1,500 and 2,000 residents of East Liberty and Homewood.

Damon-Pythias Friendship Ends in Dual Death

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Under the yellowing trees in the Naval Academy cemetery at Annapolis the body of Lieut. Woodward Phelps will be buried tomorrow, and two days later, somewhere out on the Atlantic where the water is dark green and deep, Lieut. Commander Benjamin F. Staud, of Pittsburgh, will be buried at sea, ending a Damon-Pythias friendship.

Staud shot and killed himself September 12 at Southampton, England, during the first sea trip of the Cruiser Houston, and Phelps, authorities said today, crushed by the death of his Naval Academy and service pal, ended his life in exactly the same fashion as Staud.

Phelps, 28-year-old son of Admiral William Woodward Phelps, was found dead late Sunday night on the Cruiser Northampton here with a pistol bullet in his head. On the floor near the body was a newspaper clipping telling of Staud's suicide.

Naval officers said the two men had been close friends in academy days and in service.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Five million voters in New York, Wisconsin and Massachusetts trooped to the polls today in the last of the state primaries, to choose party candidates for the major battles of November's elections.

A Republican state convention in Connecticut and a Democratic state conclave in Delaware added diversity to the day's political developments, but the senatorial race in Massachusetts held the center of interest.

Prohibition was the rampant issue in the old Bay State and in Delaware too, but out in Wisconsin, the LaFollette family battled again on its favorite issue, insurgency.

GAZE UPON BAY STATE

The Massachusetts contests attracted national interest because William M. Butler, friend of former President Coolidge and former Republican national chairman, sought the Republican senatorial nomination. Running as a dry, Butler was opposed by Eben S. Draper, former state senator, who is anti-dry, and Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, the moist mayor of Newburyport.

Butler's two opponents made prohibition the outstanding issue, so far as the national politicians are concerned.

SAME SORT OF RACE

The Democratic senatorial contests in the Bay State presented the same sort of race. Marcus A. Coolidge, former mayor of Fitchburg, an anti-dry, is opposed by former Gov. Eugene N. Foss, a dry, as the outstanding candidates, although Peter J. Joyczen, a manufacturer, former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, of Boston, and Joseph F. O'Connell, former representative, are also in the race.

BATTLE IN DELAWARE

The other out-and-out anti-dry fight is being staged at the Democratic convention in Delaware. Former Senator Thomas F. Bayard looks like a winner over Josiah Marvel, backed by the drys. If Bayard does get the nomination, Delaware will stage another dry battle in November, since the Republicans there already have nominated Senator Daniel O. Hastings, who has Anti-Saloon League support.

In New York, prohibition played a part in some of the congressional campaigns. There, as in Massachusetts and Wisconsin, drys and anti-drys will watch the outcome of the primary nominations for the House. Thus far the anti-drys have defeated some outstanding drys in the primaries and they hope to get even more seats in the elections.

LAFOLLETTE IS ISSUE

In Wisconsin, Philip F. LaFollette, brother of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., seeks the Republican gubernatorial nomination against the regular, Gov. Walter J. Kohler. LaFollette is anti-dry and so is Kohler, but the campaign was fought on the question of LaFollette control of the state. The winner in the primary is assured of election.

The contests today wind up the primaries, but New Mexico and Rhode Island must yet hold state conventions.

HUB MAYOR, FOE IN FIST FIGHT

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, and Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic state committee, were involved in a fight in the broadcasting rooms of station WNAC last night just after Donahue had delivered a bitter arraignment of Curley.

Daniel H. Coakley, Boston politician backing Joseph B. Ely for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said after the fight that his son, Gael, had been hit three times while protecting Donahue from the rush of Curley, and that he would ask for a warrant for Curley's arrest today on an assault and battery charge.

Donahue and Curley both broadcast last night. Donahue accused Mayor Curley of violating the corrupt practices act.

Witnesses at the studio said Curley cried: "He can't get away with that," as Donahue finished and that a scuffle ensued. When the studio was cleared there was another encounter on the street in which, Coakley charged, Curley again hit his son, Gael Coakley.

Weather Conditions

The Central valleys disturbance moved eastward very slowly during the last 24 hours. The center is still north of the Great Lakes, and extends southward over the Ohio Valley states to the Gulf states. It produced showers and thunderstorms throughout the Ohio Valley and the South-west to the Gulf. Rains were heavy along the west Gulf coast and there was a heavy shower at Cincinnati. The skies are still overcast over Indiana and eastward to the coast, and is raining this morning at Cincinnati, Knoxville, Nashville and Chattanooga. The skies are clear over the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Plains states. Warm weather continues over the eastern portion of the country, but it is cool over the Northwest with freezing temperature in Southern Saskatchewan.

River Conditions

The rivers continue stationary. Stage at Franklin is three-tenths out of bank. Below here, Lock No. 7 is 6 feet. Fellowtown, 9.1; Dam No. 4, 9.1; Dam No. 5, 7.1; Dam No. 6, 8.6, and Dam No. 12, 4.0. The dams are up.

Aviation Bulletin

The center of the disturbance is still north of the Great Lakes, and extends southward over the Ohio Valley states. It is producing thunderstorms over the Lower Lakes, the Upper Ohio Valley and southward. The skies are overcast from Indiana eastward ceiling only 400 feet in Indiana and 2,500 to 10,000 feet over Ohio and Pennsylvania. At Newark the ceiling at 10:30 was unlimited, visibility was only one mile, due to fog and smoke. Elsewhere the visibility ranged from three to seven miles. The wind movement is light from the southwest.

3 Reported Indicted For De Priest Threat

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A true bill charging extortion by threats of murder was reported voted late yesterday by the grand jury, naming three men accused of demanding $10,000 or the life of Representative Oscar De Priest, Negro congressman of the First Illinois District.

Julius Link, minor political figure of De Priest's bailiwick, Solly Lason, a milk truck driver, and Joseph Goldstein were the three reported accused. Link and Lason were in custody, Goldstein was sought, and Aaron Mosheik, first accused of plotting the extortion attempt, was released after a brief hearing.

Houses Float Away In Messina Storm

MESSINA, Italy, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—One person was killed and another injured when a roof fell during the terrific storm which struck this seaport at midnight.

Several houses floated away into the flooded streets, their occupants held prisoners inside. There was heavy property damage.

to weather conditions on the course and believed that a postponement was best under the conditions.

"It will give me a chance," he said, "to install a new sailing motor in the Shamrock. The old one doesn't seem to run very well on this American petrol."

Sir Thomas told his guests he was disappointed for them that the entertainment for the day had been canceled.

"It's a pity," he said. "People come from so far to see the race and there is none. I can't make the weather, but I wish I could."

The last of the Shamrocks, an object of commiseration yesterday as it finished all of a mile and a quarter astern for the worst beating any Shamrock has ever taken in this event, may try again tomorrow and, failing then, will make its fourth and final gesture Thursday. After that, it will be free of this distressing obligation and so will its owner, the perennial Sir Thomas Lipton. For him, too, it will be the end.

SHAMROCKS TO PASS

His Shamrocks are to pass from the seas they have graced with 31 years of fruitless challenging. Their passing will break the succession of British endeavor in the cup series, dating back to 1851.

Whatever the cause, the result was two obviously one-sided races on Saturday and yesterday, and unless racing luck runs strongly with the challenger, this ought to be pretty much the outcome of tomorrow's program. This was to follow the pattern of Saturday's premiere of the windward-and-leeward course.

NYE PREVENTS M'CORMICK STATEMENT

Senator C. C. Dill, Washington, took their seats. Their committee colleagues, Senator Dale, of Vermont, and Senator Wagner, of New York, had not arrived.

Carlstrom had signified a desire to read a statement pleading for "justice in the name of a representative in the United States Congress and the State of Illinois."

DISMISSES DANNENBERGS

Without permitting anyone to seek recognition, Chairman Nye began reading a statement, in which he announced dismissal of the Dannenbergs.

The Dannenberg records, thought at first to contain valuable information, Senator Nye said, were of no value to the committee. He absolve them and said they were no longer needed. The committee yesterday had obtained possession of 50 telegrams received by the Dannenberg Agency. They were chiefly exchanges between officials and operatives of the detective agency referring apparently to the shadowing of Senator Nye in North Dakota, Washington and Glacier Park.

In his statement "setting forth the position of this committee," Senator Nye denied it had ever employed spies to follow and pry into the private affairs of anyone and denied emphatically that it had directly or indirectly planned or participated in any way in the theft of records from Mrs. McCormick's files.

NYE STATEMENT READ

Carlstrom stood waiting while Nye read his statement. As soon as the Senator concluded, he began a plea to be heard. He said:

"Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick has been charged with some very serious things. Justice demands that she be given the right to defend her honor and dignity, both as a candidate and as a member of Congress. I don't feel that she or the state of Illinois is being accorded justice. We want to establish by proof, on the testimony of two witnesses, certain facts pertaining to the work of committee agents in this matter. We have these witnesses ready to present in this hearing. We have kept them from hands into which they might have fallen—only to become intimidated."

Nye intervened:

"Because Senator Wagner is not here, we must defer the permission you ask. Call Mrs. Reinecke."

REPEATS ANSWER

To every further plea of Carlstrom or Charles Rundall, Nye had one answer:

"Call Mrs. Reinecke."

Senator Patterson interpolated a statement as Nye called repeatedly for Mrs. Reinecke and she took her seat in the witness chair. Patterson said:

"I do not join in the statement just made by the chairman. Until recently I have had nothing to do with the work of this cittee and I had nothing to do with the employing by the committee of its agents or accountants. I reserve all opinion and judgment until after the hearings are completed."

After the first clash, in which Carlstrom, Rundall and Nye engaged in a three-cornered battle of repartee, the hearing calmed down to the prosaic business of questions on campaign expenses.

Fog Holds Up 5,000 On Atlantic Liners

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Heavy fog today hung over New York harbor and Manhattan holding up trans-Atlantic vessels carrying 5,000 passengers and delaying all ferry boats.

Coolidge Hopes German Republic Will Endure

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 16.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Many of our people have watched with much solicitude the general election in Germany held last Sunday. Like other European countries, Germany is embarrassed by a multiplicity of political parties, making effective parliamentary government possible only by a coalition of none too friendly elements. This has been effected heretofore by the center moderates, opposed by the extreme reactionaries and radicals. When this method broke down in July the chancellor and president carried on the government under an emergency article of the constitution. This compelled an election.

Calvin Coolidge.

As both the radicals and reactionaries are opposed to the republic, and most of the domestic and foreign policies it has adopted, the continuity of present policy through parliamentary action depended on the moderates of the center. They are not strong enough to control parliament and adopt a sound financial program. Betwee Fascism and Communism the government will be subjected to a severe strain.

Under the republic the German people have shown a great reserve of courage and reason. The stabilitiy of Europe requires its continuance.

William Thompson, as trustees of the Niccolls estate.

As he presented the check for $4,900, Andrew said, he asked the Princess if she needed more money. Then he advised her that he had borrowed $4,000 from the estate and she asked that J. V. Thompson indorse the note. He did, and in a year, Andrew said, he paid off the note.

The first of 90 character witnesses of the defendant were being heard.

Instead of defrauding the Niccols estate of $126,000, as alleged, J. V. Thompson made the heirs thousands of dollars through coal deals, according to the contention of the defense in the embezzlement proceedings, instituted by Gerald Fitzgerald, the blind son of Lord and Lady Fitzgerald, the latter of whom is now the Princess of Thurn and Taxis.

Thompson declared there was no intent on his part to defraud, as the transactions he had with the Nicolls' heirs were legal.

AWARD WIDOW $16,813

A jury in Common Pleas Court today awarded Mrs. Theresa Kish, of Fifth street, Duquesne, $16,813.50 in her suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad that grew out of the death of her husband, Louis Kish, killed April 14, 1928, while crossing the tracks at Duquesne.

At the public crossing in Duquesne, Kish was killed when he passed between the sections of a cut freight. As Kish was between the cars the ends came together, decapitating him. Mrs. Kish has two children, Dorothy, 4, and William, 2.

Return Seized Rum, Escort Ship to Sea

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—With 1,039 cases of returned liquor in her hold, the Canadian ship Ray Roberts was escorted to sea yesterday by three Coast Guard cutters.

Attorneys for the vessel and her crew, seized on a smuggling charge, last July, declared part of her equipment and cargo was missing, among other things, 11 cases of whisky, engineroom tools and a barometer. They said a formal protest would be filed. Customs officials denied the alleged shortage.

Navy to Investigate Destroyer Collision

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The destroyers Hatfield and Sands were damaged in a collision off Newport, R. I., Friday night.

The Navy disclosed the accident today in announcing that Vice Admiral Arthur L. Willard, commander of the destroyer squadron of the scouting fleet, had ordered a board of investigation to ascertain its cause.

SILENT KILLER ELUDES NET

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Police still were searching today for definite clues to the identity of the silent slayer of 17-year-old Alice Woltman, killed in her home early Sunday. They questioned relatives and friends in a frantic effort to solve South Bend's second girl murder within a few weeks.

Her throat slashed, the girl was found on the stairs of her home. The slayer had climbed to a roof, walked to the girl's window, entered the bedroom, silently slashed her throat and disappeared.

Two young men friends of the girl were questioned, but police said no valuable information was gained.

Alex Pietrzak, 18, who said he was engaged to Alice, and Barney Kluszyusci, 23, who had been attentive to her, knew nothing of the crime, police said.

10 Miners Injured As Car Jumps Rail

BENWOOD, W. Va., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Ten miners were hurt, three seriously, as a mine car was derailed and crashed into an entry rib in a mine near here. Joe Yingling, 47; Nick Mendas, 50, and Sam Dumbrosky, 58, all of Benwood, were taken to a hospital, where it was said they would recover.

SILLS, FILM STAR, DIES AT 48

Collapses While Playing Tennis With His Wife; Noted for 'He-Man' Roles

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Milton Sills, who deserted a career as an educator for the stage and reached his zenith of fame as a motion picture actor, is dead.

The player of "two-fisted" roles was stricken last night while playing tennis with his wife, the former Doris Kenyon, film actress, at their suburban home, and 15 minutes later died of what was diagnosed as heart disease without regaining consciousness. He was 48 years old.

ATHLETIC ACTOR

Sills' passing takes from the screen the second of its noted actors within a month. Lon Chaney, noted for his grotesque character roles, died here in August.

Tall and strapping, Sills was one of the films' best athletes. Although he had been ill in 1929 and last spring, he was thought to have been in perfect health this summer.

A party of friends gathered at the Sills home yesterday. During the afternoon the actor complained of feeling ill.

At 6:30 p. m. he collapsed and was carried into the house. He was dead when physicians arrived.

Sills was born in Chicago January 12, 1882. He graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Chicago in 1903, but remained at the university for several years as an instructor of philosophy.

SCHOOL TO STAGE

An interest in amateur theatricals took Sills from the scholarly atmosphere of the university and put him behind the footlights. A prominent producer witnessed one of his performances and persuaded him to take up acting as a vocation.

In 1914 he joined the migration to Hollywood and the screen. His stature—Sills was 6 feet 1-inch tall and weighed 190 pounds—won for him the two-fisted roles which led to stardom.

Among the best of his motion pictures were "The Barker," "Burning Daylight," "The Crash," "The Hawk's Nest" and "The Valley of the Giants."

At the height of his stage career Sills married Gladys Edith Wynne in London, May 26, 1910. To them was born a daughter, Dorothy, who was with her father when he died. The marriage ended in the local divorce courts in 1925, Mrs. Sills charging desertion. A year later Sills married Miss Kenyon, and to them was born a son, Kenyon Clarence Sills, now 3 years old.

North Carolina Bank Fails to Open Doors

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Raleigh Banking and Trust Company did not open for business today, and a statement issued by the directors said it would be liquidated. The statement said the Page Trust Company had agreed to act as liquidating agent, and would pay all depositors 50 per cent of their deposits as soon as the necessary legal details could be concluded. Belief that depositors would eventually be paid in full was expressed.

Dravo Concern Gets Subway Contract

A contract for constructing an extension to the Market street subway under the Schuylkill River in Philadelphia has been awarded the Dravo Construction Company, officials announced. The bid submitted was for $3,692,635, with a limit to the contract set at $4,000,000. Work will be started this month and completed in a little more than two years.

G. O. P. Candidate In New York Shot

His alleged assailants were arrested.

'Discoverer' of Dempsey, John the Barber, Dies

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—John the Barber, boxer, fight promoter and one of Broadway's best-known figures for three decades, is dead as the result of an infected finger. He was 57 years old.

His real name was John J. Reisler. One of his claims to fame was that he discovered Jack Dempsey. John often was quoted as saying:

"I bought Dempsey his first suit of clothes. He didn't weigh 160 pounds then. His toes were sticking out of his shoes. I bought him everything from underwear to collar buttons, and what did he do? He ran out on me."

Reisler eventually sued Dempsey for breach of contract. After prolonged litigation, the case was settled out of court.

John the Barber began as a boxer, but later turned promoter. Abe Attell was one of his proteges.

One of Broadway's show places was John's barber shop, reconstructed from the Mayfair Theater, in West Forty-fourth street. There, amid Versailles mirrors, green marble basins and near-jade fittings, worked a corps of 25 manicurists who, John said, had been recruited from the "pick of Broadway's beauty choruses." They were ready to sing or dance for patrons, as well as groom their fingernails.

John was one of the principal witnesses at the trial of Police Lieut. Charles A. Becker and four gunmen for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who was slain in Forty-third street July 16, 1912. John, one of the first to reach the scene of the shooting, recognized one of the gunmen.

Dixie Blonde and Kin Held In 'Marriage Racket'

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Sally Le Blanc, 21, and blonde, who came from the Mississippi cotton fields 18 months ago because she had heard "there was lots of easy money up North," is held for the grand jury here in $2,500 bail, on the charge of attempted fraud.

Sally admitted, at her hearing, that she obtained about $400 by offering herself as a bride to anybody who could pay $1,000 to care for her "aged and helpless mother."

The trouble was, Sally already was married. And besides, she told the judge, her mother is only 43 and not helpless.

Held also for the grand jury are Sally's relatives by marriage, Jack Madeson and his wife, Rose, charged with trying to operate a marriage racket, with Sally as the bait. Magistrate Marvin fixed their bail twice as high as Sally's, remarking:

"They evidently made Sally do all the dirty work and then took half of the money."

The charge is that Sally accepted a down payment of $750 from Sukeji Sukuki, Japanese chef, gave half of it to the Madesons, and then disappeared. She was arrested in New Bedford, Mass. [illegible]R Mangraite also has confessed that Sally accepted $500 from him and promised to become his bride.

PINCHOT PLANS TO AID JOBLESS

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR., Staff Correspondent.

JEANNETTE, Pa., Sept. 16.—Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, opened the Jeannette Industrial and Commercial Exposition here yesterday with a speech promising study of unemployment and heavy expenditures on country roads, ending by throwing down the gauntlet to the Philadelphia political machine.

The Exposition brought throngs estimated at between five and ten thousand persons to the grounds. Factories, stores and institutions serving the district placed exhibitions of their wares in the booths for public inspection. Live stock and poultry, much of it blue-blooded, were on exhibition, representing farming sections of Westmoreland County.

Pinchot appealed to industrially slack Jeannette with his promise to appoint an unofficial committee within two weeks, requiring them to make a complete study of unemployment in the state and to report to him by January 1, prior to his inauguration. He promised then to include their recommendations, so far as practicable, in his first message to the Assembly.

Pinchot said he plans to spend not less than $50,000,000 on improvement of minor country roads during his four years of office, if elected. He favors taking under state supervision and maintenance some 20,000 miles of township roads, claiming that $10,000,000 will thus be lifted from the farmer's tax bill.

Pinchot challenged the Philadelphia Republican machine with this statement:

"If they want four years of war, they can sure have it."

CONFER ON SITE OF TOWN HALL

Another meeting, having as its aim the selection of a site for the long-awaited Town Hall, was to be held in the County Commissioners' hearing room this afternoon. It was called at the instigation of Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong, who had adjourned the previous get-together August 26.

Advocates of proposed sites were to expound their views as to where the building should be placed.

Thirty-five sites already have been eliminated.

EAST ST. BRIDGE DEDICATED

Rain interrupted the speaking exercises at the dedication of East Street Bridge last night, but 1,000 or more enthusiastic men, women and children who participated in an automobile parade across the new span and through the principal streets of the district carried out their part of the program.

Edward A. Young, chairman of ceremonies, commemorated the occasion with acknowledgement of the foresightedness of Public Works Director Edward G. Lang and other city officials.

Chairman Young had spoken for several minutes and had just introduced Mayor Charles H. Kline when the rain began to fall.

The ribbon-cutting exercises were hurriedly held under umbrellas, little Jean Lyon and Oliver Einstein, dressed in white, severing the strands and ducking to shelter. The parade got under way almost immediately, several hundred automobiles participating in the procession.

PORTER CHOICE VOTE DAY SET

An election to select a successor to Congressman Stephen G. Porter will be held November 4, the regular fall election day, Gov. John S. Fisher today notified Allegheny County officers of the time for electing a congressman in the Thirty-second District for the unexpired term.

Next Saturday Republican committeemen and women of the district will meet in North Side Carnegie Hall to select a nominee for the full term.

It is expected the Republican organization will get behind the man selected as nominee for election to the unexpired term.

John A. Schrader, secretary of the Board of Mercantile Appraisers, will nominate Edmund F. Erk, Porter's secretary for 20 years.

This nomination will be seconded by Miss Anna C. Boggs, of Emsworth, according to present plans. Others expected to be placed in nomination are Attorney Charles G. Lane, Jr., and Ralph L. Flinn.

ERECT CROSSES ON BOULEVARD

Twenty white crosses were being erected today around the Bigelow boulevard monument by the Better Traffic Committee. Painters were finishing painting the slogan of the committee on the monument:

"Stay Alive—20 Children Killed in Traffic this Year."

The Bureau of Traffic planning has co-operated with the committee by having "Slow-Look-Read" painted on the inbound and outbound lanes of the boulevard.

Old Master, Sold For $55, Worth $25,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The New York Herald Tribune says a small, apparently ordinary painting, bought six months ago for $55, has definitely emerged as a work of the master, Rubens, valued at $25,000.

GRACE'S WORD AGAINST EATON

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, pitted his word against that of Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier and leading opponent of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel merger when he was recalled yesterday as a defense witness in the injunction suit against the merger.

Eaton previously had denied that at a meeting of the principals in Cleveland on March 11, one day before Youngstown directors approved the consolidation, he had said he was "unalterably opposed" to the merger.

Grace testified that he did make such a statement.

Eaton also had denied a quotation imputed to him at the same meeting, that he "had other plans for Youngstown."

Grace said he also made that statement in just those words. In direct testimony Eaton quoted J. A. Campbell, Youngstown chairman, as saying at the March 11 meeting that he did not have much to do with the merger negotiations, but that they were handled chiefly by Grace and Henry G. Dalton, of Cleveland, a director in both companies.

Grace said he was willing to swear he did not hear Campbell make any such statement.

MASONS HONOR DAVIS, FISHER

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—The Supreme Council of Thirty-third Degree Masons, northern jurisdiction, with Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, of Illinois, taking an active part, met here today in preparation for conferring the degree tonight on 77 candidates, including Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Gov. John S. Fisher, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts, and former Lieut. Gov. William G. Pickerel, of Ohio.

Mouthtar Bey, ambassador from Turkey, was one of the prominent thirty-third degree Masons here, as were Col. Robert Gordon Sherman-Crawford, grand commander of the Supreme Council of Ireland, and Prof. Delmar D. Darrah, of Bloomington, Ill.

ALIEN SCHOOL RESUMED

The day school for foreigners, conducted by the Board of Public Education, in the Hancock school building, Webster and Seventh avenues, has been opened for the 1930-1931 term, according to school officials.

The school is in session on regular school days from 9 a. m. until 12 noon and again from 1:15 p. m. to 3:45 p. m. Men and women may come at any time and stay as long as convenient. They receive assistance in the study of the English language.

There is also a junior department where boys and girls of school age receive instruction in various subjects that will prepare them for higher schools. Instruction in all classes is free to the residents of Pittsburgh.

The night classes opened last night and will be held each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock.

SUSPECTS DENY LINGLE KILLING

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Ted Geisking, arrested here Friday as a vagrant, today admitted his identity to George Williams, Chicago detective.

However, Geisking denied that he murdered Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, or knew anything about that slaying.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—James (Red) Forsythe, sought for several months as a suspect in the Lingle murder, was held at the detective bureau today. He satisfied authorities that he was at home sick in bed the day Lingle was shot, according to Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney.

HELD UP, LOSES $21,000 GEMS

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—C. Edward Knoblock, of New Castle, was robbed of jewelry valued at $21,000 by the two men who knocked him unconscious in a roadside holdup near here early today, he told Mahoning County officers who found him dazed beside his automobile.

Knoblock said he had stopped at a resort in Niles while driving from Elyria and, between Niles and Youngstown, was halted by motor trouble. A large automobile drove up, he declared, and two men jumped out and held him up. He was knocked down when he resisted. Two emerald rings and a diamond were taken, he added.

CURTAIN FALLS ON IRIGOYEN

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Although a few days ago his name was flying from lip to lip and appeared on the front pages of newspapers all over the world, the Argentine today has about forgotten the broken old man who sits and broods aboard the cruiser Belgrano while Provisional President Uriburu remains undecided concerning his disposal.

Dr. Hipolito Irigoyen, if not exactly forgotten by the millions he ruled with an iron hand for 11 years, at least is ignored by them. On the broad boulevards of Buenos Aires, where machine guns rattled and his name was heard even above the din 10 days ago, he is rarely mentioned and the newspapers here seem to have dropped him.

Financial and other policy matters, meanwhile, concern the provisional government. Minister of Finance Perez has announced that, during the month, 46,425,000 pesos will be floated in loans to rehabilitate the government.

BELL ON STAND DENIES KILLING

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—Tony Bell has talked.

The murder of John F. Donohoe more than a year ago stilled his tongue, but today the defendant in the case went on the witness stand in his own behalf.

Bell was the first witness called at the morning session. His attorneys held a long conference with him last night relative to his appearance as a witness.

Bell after giving a history of his life in an official capacity welded the alibi links which had been furnished by witnesses who preceded him. He denied that he was in any way connected with the murder of Donohoe and outlined his movements the day before the murder, the night of the murder and the following day.

Bell's testimony corroborated that of other witnesses. He said that he knew nothing of the murder until told by his wife, who had heard it from neighbors.

COSTE ARRIVES IN SYRACUSE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Maj. Dieudonne Coste and his trans-Atlantic flying companion Lieut. Maurice Bellonte landed at the airport here at noon (E. D. T.) today en route from Boston to Cleveland.

They were greeted by a large crowd and were guests at a luncheon.

FIXING OF TAGS UP TO COUNCIL

The campaign against tag fixing by ward chairmen and other politicians has been brought to the attention of Council.

That body has before it an ordinance prepared by the Better Traffic Committee to stop a practice which, members of the committee assert, interferes with the safety campaign against accidents.

The ordinance was presented yesterday, sent to committee and will be considered today or tomorrow.

The committee's ordinance provides for a custodian of tags, to be designated by Council, who will issue tags only on requisition and receipt, and that traffic law enforcement machinery be placed on a "cash register" or "sales slip" basis, such as is in vogue in department stores.

Records and accounts for tags are to be reported to City Council and the Mayor monthly with the stipulation that such reports are to be public property.

A survey of illegal parking conditions in the downtown business district by the Bureau of Traffic Planning and the Better Traffic Committee recently showed that 4,496 cars were parked on no-parking streets for an average period of 47 minutes between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. This represented an increase of 15.4 per cent over the 3,800 cars illegally parked on such streets for an average period of only 26 minutes during a count made more than a year ago.

Bail Refused Youth In Shooting Father

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Benjamin Cacallare, 19, was held without bail today on a charge of shooting to death his father, Gaetano, 43, in their South Philadelphia home last night. Police said members of the Cacallaro family supported Benjamin's statement that he shot the father in self-defense.

Canada Passes Bill For Jobless Relief

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The $20,000,000 government unemployment bill was passed by the House of Commons last night.

Final passage followed defeat of an amendment by J. S. Woodworth, Labor member from Winnipeg, that fair wages be instituted in all pubdic work carried out under the fund.

1,440 Naughty Dolls 'Deported' to Japan

SEATTLE, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Ten gross of Japanese bisque dolls, which federal authorities said were too naughty to be described in legal phraseology, will be "deported."

A libel action against the dolls was dismissed after those who had shipped them here for consignment to a New York novelty company agreed to order them sent back to Japan.

Nobile Rescuer's Funeral Arranged

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Funeral arrangements were made today for Victor Nielsen, Swedish aviation sergeant who discovered Gen. Umberto Nobile and his Arctic exploration party near the North Pole. The airman was killed in a crash while instructing a student pilot.

'Rainmaker' Fails to Coax One Drop Earthward

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Dr. G. I. A. M. Sykes failed in his efforts to produce rain during the races at Belmont Park yesterday.

Some papers say Dr. Sykes has received $8,000 in fees for operating his mystical rain-controlling contraption, which, he insists, maintained sunny weather for seven days of the present meeting.

He announced recently that he would bring rain yesterday to prove the extent of his weather control. He worked with his equipment all day, but no rain was forthcoming. Belmont Park authorities have admitted no contractural relations with him.

Editor Files Plea For Maiden Name

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Restoration of her maiden name, Elinor Medill Patterson, was asked in a petition filed yesterday in Circuit Court here on behalf of Mrs. Elinor Schlessinger, editor of the Washington Herald.

Mrs. Schlessinger is the widow of Elmer Schlessinger, Chicago attorney, killed last year when he fell from a horse in South Carolina.

Her appointment as editor of the Washington newspaper was made recently.

British 'Dry' Predicts Repeal in U. S. Soon

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Repeal of American prohibition laws within three years was predicted here today in a letter written by James Stewart, Labor member of parliament from Glasgow, a prohibitionist. Stewart recently returned from a visit to America, where he found prohibition a "tragic failure," the letter said.

Children Back Up Mother In Accusing 'Racketeer'

Declaring her "racketeer husband" had threatened and intimidated her witnesses, Mrs. Mae Agnes Paul, 32, of 7258 Schley street, brought her two small children into Common Pleas Court today to testify in her divorce suit against Edward C. Paul, of 7710 Waverly street.

Without swearing them, Judge Frank P. Patterson heard Fred, 11, and Bettey Paul, 10, corroborate their mother's testimony of abuse at the hands of her husband.

Asked by the court the nature of Paul's business, Mrs. Paul testified he was a racketeer with slot machine concessions. She said he was "in trouble" at the same time as Alfred W. Forney, but that she could not tell the court of her husband's associates.

She said she was married 12 years ago and had left her husband recently after he beat her and broke dishes in their home. She declarde her mate was never sober. Mrs. Paul, after leaving her husband, conducted a beauty parlor in East Liberty. She is now employed as a nurse.

them. In fact we hardly think of them.

"Yet, they are the soul of democracy, the very life of liberty.

"We sent our splendid young men abroad in the late war to fight to make the world safe for democracy. We won the war but we did not gain our object. Since the war there is hardly any democracy left in the world.

"There is mainly tyranny—the tyranny of Bolshevism, the tyranny of despotism, the tyranny of militarism, and the tyranny of sham Republicanism.

"Liberty and democracy are our familiars in this country. They walk together hand in hand throughout the length and breadth of the land.

"And with them marches truth, serene and unafraid.

"Of all the citizens of this republic who have reason to be grateful that they are residents in it, the most reverently thankful should be the journalists."

HOME OF FREE PRESS

"They are allowed to tell the truth here, and, in fact, are not very highly esteemed if they tell anything else.

"My advice to independent journalists who contemplate going abroad is to remain in this free country.

"This is the place to exercise independence. This is the place to enjoy liberty. This is the home of freedom of thought, of freedom of speech, of freedom of the press.

"And the best way to make liberty and democracy safe for the world is to cherish and protect them here at home."

Spokesmen for the World War veterans praised Mr. Hearst for his support of veterans' relief measures, his fight against foreign entanglements and his action in securing and printing the secret document relating to the Anglo-French naval agreement.

OTHER SPEAKERS

In addition to Senator Wagner, U. S. Senator Hamilton Kean, of New Jersey; Surrogate John T. O'Brien and Congressman Fiorello La Guardia were among those who greeted Mr. Hearst. Others who made welcoming remarks were Congressman Loring M. Black, Jr., who also spoke for Senator Royal S. Copeland, who missed the boat; John D. Flynn, National Security League; Rabbi Emmanuel J. Jack, national chaplain, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Louis Mann, the actor, and others.

Other speakers were Congressman Guy Campbell, of Pennsylvania; Commissioner Donald A. Davison, of the District of Columbia, and Daniel J. Manning, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A radiogram from Paul C. Wolman, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Wolman's associates, had promised Mr. Hearst a cordial welcome. The radiogram read:

"You will be greeted upon arrival as one of the greatest Americans of all time."

MEET EUROPA

As the Europa emerged from the fog below quarantine, those on excursion steamer Hook Mountain cheered and shouted for Mr. Hearst. The several hundred veterans waved flags and crowded to the rail. The returning publisher, from a vantage point on the top deck of the liner, doffed his hat to his friends, waved and smiled in acknowledgment of the greeting.

Louis Mann, speaking for the Friars' Club on behalf of the theater world, gripped Mr. Hearst's hand and referring to the publisher's reply to the French premier's order to leave France, said:

"We marvel at the facile mind that gave such an admirable retort. If I might paraphrase David Warfield, I'd say, 'If they don't want you, we want you. If they won't take you, we'll take you.'"

Congressman Loring M. Black of Brooklyn, in greeting Mr. Hearst, said:

"I represent a committee of congressmen here to welcome you. We do this because for years you have been a stalwart champion of human progress through political freedom. We resent the action of France concerning you. It was aimed at the integrity of our passport and the freedom of the press. We feel America should honor you for exposing the international skullduggery involved in the secret treaty. Welcome home."

Congressman LaGuardia said:

"I never thought that I would see a time when a distinguished American would be told he was unwelcome in France. Every veteran resents it. Mr. Hearst, you did a great service for world peace in disclosing the terms of that secret treaty."

VETERAN IS HEARD

Congressman William P. Connery, of Massachusetts, who served as color sergeant of the hard-fighting 26th Division in France, declared:

"Mr. Hearst, we know you fought for us on the veterans' bonus and in other veterans' relief legislation. I bespeak the thoughts of every ex-service man here when I thank you for your relentless fight against the League of Nations, against the World Court and for real Americanism, first, last and all the time."

William Griffin, who headed the committee in charge of the reception, said:

"The Hearst newspapers have always fought for America, and American ideals and principles."

SIRENS SHRILL WELCOME

Congressman Guy E. Campbell, of Pennsylvania, Senator Kean, of New Jersey, Commissioner Donald A. Davison, of the District of Columbia, Daniel J. Manning of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other speakers praised the publisher for his Americanism and heartily welcomed him home.

Congressman Black said that Gov. Roosevelt had asked him to extend greetings to Mr. Hearst.

Sirens of passing steamers made it difficult at times for the welcoming speakers to be heard. But before the excursion steamer reached the Battery, Mr. Hearst was left in no doubt that his friends were glad to see him.

The Pennsylvania delegation greeting Mr. Hearst included, in addition to Congressman Campbell, Congressmen Harry A. Estep, P. J. Sullivan and J. Russell Leech, State Senator Frank J. Harris ad H. M. Bitner, publisher of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Schock of Husband's Death Kills Widow

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—As the casket containing the body of James Calabrese, 40, of Greensburg, was moved from his home for final funeral services, another containing the body of his widow, Mrs. Filomena Calabrese, 43, replaced it. The woman died of a heart attack attributed to shock caused by the death of her husband, who choked on a piece of meat that lodged in his throat.

Hearst Calls Edict of France Tribute to Loyalty

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.

On disembarking yesterday from the Europa, William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement:

I have said that I did not complain of my expulsion from France.

I think I should have said instead that there is no distinction in my 67 years which has given me more genuine gratification.

Moreover, I hope and believe that this distinction is one I have actually deserved.

For nearly 50 years I have been active in journalism. I take the obligations of my profession very seriously.

I think a newspaper owes a great debt to the public, and that the newspaper's first duty is to keep its public fully and accurately informed about all important matters which affect the public safety and welfare.

There is a lot of trivial news which must perfunctorily be printed; but the vital obligation of a newspaper is to print the important news, and print it without political bias or personal prejudice.

This I have always tried to do, and the action of France in my case is, I consider, merely conspicuous recognition by a great nation of the honorable fact that I have done my full duty to my own people and to my chosen profession.

The critical situation in Europe today does intimately concern the best interests of our people.

We have been drawn into European intrigues and embroilments once. I do not believe we want to be so involved again.

Therefore, whatever I learn abroad which affects the peace and safety or any essential interest of the United States of America, I have printed and intend to print whether European governments like it or not.

I owe no allegiance and recognize no responsibility to foreign governments, and will naturally submit to no undue influence or control by them.

If you ask, "Do foreign governments attempt to influence American newspapers?" the answer is, "They do."

France has tried persistently to seduce the American press; and her most effective means of seduction has been the widespread distribution of the little red ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

Many American newspapers have been caught by this little red ribbon as guileleesly as bullfrogs are hooked by a bit of red flannel; but I have never allowed any members of my organization to accept civil decorations from any foreign nation or to put themselves or my papers under obligations to any foreign government.

Indeed, I think Congress should forbid the wearing of foreign decorations by American citizens, except military decorations honorably won in war.

If our bourgeois aristocracy want some recognition of achievements not sufficiently conspicuous to be known without advertisement, let Congress create a RIGHT ROYAL BROTHERHOOD OF SUPER-AMERICANS, and confer blue ribbons like the prizes at a horse show and so keep American loyalty at home.

The great Napoleon, who devised the Legion of Honor, knew human weaknesses and recognized the irrepressible inclination of the citizens of a republic to covet the titles and insignia their democracy teaches them to disdain.

All men are created equal in one respect at least, and that is in their desire to be unequal.

France has played upon this human vanity to such an extent that in any crowd abroad it is always possible to recognize the Americans by their French decorations.

I know what France expects in return for her little red ribbon, and feel that the loyalty to France above all else, which is properly the highest honor and greatest glory to a Frenchman, might easily be on occasion the deepest dishonor to an independent American journalist.

The influence over the Hearst press, which France failed to secure by cajolery, she has attempted to obtain by force. Either method is equally futile, but the latter is the more flattering.

Therefore, I think I should feel no resentment against Monsieur Tardieu for a compliment no less real because it was unintended; and I think I should, and I believe I do, feel a certain sense of gratitude to France for her unconscious tribute to the American loyalty and inflexible independence of the Hearst press.

BRUENING CLAN CHALLENGES FASCISTS

Chancellor, Supported by Hindenburg, Offers Same Cabinet After Elections

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS.
International News Service.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Powerful Germany party leaders, recovered from their amazement over the sensational outcome of elections Sunday in which the extremists leaped to the forefront at the expense of more moderate factions, girded for battle today while the drums of political war rumbled.

The marching Fascists, empowered with 107 seats in the coming Reichstag and led by the at once colorful and militant Adolf Hitler, pounded at the administration gates for entray into the inner governmental circle carrying with them the gospel of Pan-Germanism and a sweeping repudiation of the Versailles treaty and the Young plan.

MOBILIZE ADVANTAGES

Overwhelmed themselves by the magnitude of their victory, Hitler and his associates nevertheless began a rapid mobilization of advantages and hinted at an ultimatum that unless permitted to dictate governmental policies, they would refuse to participate in any coalition.

In the face of this strong radical threat from left and right, the incumbent government under Chancellor Heinrich Bruening nevertheless refused to allow itself a single faltering step in the direction of compromise with the Hitlerites. Assured the dominant support of President Paul Von Hindenburg, Bruening did not hesitate to issue an indirect challenge to the extremists by determining to present to the new Reichstag meeting October 14 the same cabinet now in office.

DEFEAT PROBABLE

The President and Bruening, it was learned, decided after a conference to battle vigorously for their program of tax reform, which precipitated the previous dissolution and succeeding elections.

The President, it was understood, intends to change the government only if defeated, a probability not unlikely in view of Fascist strength.

MORROWS QUIT MEXICAN HOME

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and Mrs. Morrow bade adios to Cuervanaca and their week-end home, where they have enjoyed many happy days and where Col. Charles A. Lindbergh paid his court to Ann Morrow.

The ambassador and his wife are returning to the United States, where he will begin his campaign as Republican candidate for senator from New Jersey.

Their farewell ceremonies were simple. Morrow called on the governor and exchanged courtesies. As a parting act, Mr. and Mrs. Morrow distributed toys to two dozen children among their neighbors.

Purchase of Hilltop Park Tract Urged

Several hundred names are signed to a petition received by Council asking that land on the north side of Grandview avenue between Olympia and Hallock streets be acquired for a small park and comfort station. The petition says this is the last open space giving a view of the city.

Another petition asked that the 23-acre property of William Miller, Baldwin road, Thirty-first Ward, be bought for a playground site. The price mentioned is $27,000.

SHELTON, CRACK SHOT, STABBED

Clare Shelton, 26, of 818 Western avenue, was in Mercy Hospital today with two severe cuts on his back, received police say, during an argument with Jerry McMahon, 26, Negro, of 1840 Rose street.

Shelton, with Richard Raymond, 30, also of 818 Western avenue, was riding in a crosstown car when McMahon jostled them. An argument started, and when they left the car in Wood street, McMahon followed them, cutting Raymond on the right hand and slashing Shelton's back, police said. McMahon was arrested from a crowd by Patrolman Louis Battis. He is being held to await the outcome of Shelton's injuries.

Shelton, known as a crack pistol shot, was discharged from the police department, November 25, 1929, for firing a shot at Leo Thomas Joyce, November 16, 1929, after he had barricaded himself in the home of his brother, Walter Shelton, at 818 Western avenue.

LUTHERAN HEAD RETIRES TODAY

The Rev. Dr. E. B. Burgess, retiring president of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church, today was to sever his official connection with the synod at a meeting of the executive committee in the Hotel Henry.

He is retiring after 10 years of service, and October 15 will become superintendent of metropolitan missions of the United Synod of New York, where he will also make his home.

Today's session of the committee will mark the beginning of the duties of the new president, the Rev. Dr. H. H. Bagger, of Butler, who will be inducted into office at a special session of the synod in the First Lutheran Church, Grant street.

Lord Castlerosse

Most Talked of Journalist in England

Now in America

Viscount Castlerosse, son of the Earl of Kenmar and a distinguished London journalist, writer of a column in the Daily Express and one of the most widely read commentators in the British newspaper world, is writing of his American impressions for the Sun-Telegraph. Herewith is printed another of Lord Castlerosse's articles in which he takes us to the international yacht cup races at Newport.

By LORD CASTLEROSSE.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16 — The last time I sailed in this cabin [illegible] Lord Brassey[illegible] and I won 1924 points in one rubber of bridge.

Now we have lost the second [illegible].

As the race was run, poor Sir Thomas Lipton was up on the bridge [illegible] over my head and yet [illegible] I say, poor! He has a sense of humor and no man so [illegible] sight else but this. He is 80 years of age and as I was talking to him yesterday, I found myself wishing that if ever I reach that age that my brain may be as clear and my body as hardy as his.

The only change I have seen in him during the time I've known him is increasing deafness. Sir Thomas' life ambition is to bring back the cup home. He will be dissatisfied this trip and yet he need not be disappointed, for in his defeat he has achieved a far greater victory than if he had won. It is a wonderful tribute to Sir Thomas' personality and sportsmanship that hearts all America should be rooting and cheering for him.

HAS CHANGED SPIRIT

The difference of spirit in international sport is greatly due to him. Those who can remember Lord Dunraven's attempt will know what I mean. That race nearly caused a war.

Yesterday as I rose and looked out of my window there was a thick fog. I had my breakfast there was still a thick fog. I came downstairs and the fog was so dense that I could hardly see Frazier Hunt, Newport is a gentle[illegible] place. It has affected spike. All he said was:

"I do hope you have not made me late."

We will get him into the social register yet.

His hope was justified and we arrived on board just in time to see the Shamrock being towed from her moorings. Somebody proposed "three cheers for the un[illegible] de dog." We cheered and then the Enterprise passed and we gave her a cheer, too.

I was then presented to Ex-Commissioner Enright and very soon I found myself cheering again.

LIPTON CHEERFUL

Just at that moment Sir Thomas passed. He seemed cheerful. The night before he had got off a good one. He had said to Nicholson:

"I congratulate you, you did finely, you never lost sight of the Defender once."

Everybody laughed, Nicholson the loudest.

I looked around for Cyl Sharman Crawford, a boy of Ulster Yacht Club, but was told that he was sailing in the Enterprise. The first race he enjoyed very much, disappointed possibly in the result, but certainly not in the luncheon. He brought the first challenge of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club over to America 32 years ago.

As the race started Sir Thomas slipped away, onto the bridge. Well, I guess you folks know the story of the race. How for the first half hour the Shamrock held the Enterprise and then how the Enterprise began to run right away. Luncheon then appeared and after a sandwich or two I came to the conclusion that the time was right for a little repose. It was lucky for me that I did, for about an hour afterwards Sir Thomas invited me to have another luncheon. By now I was hungry again.

CONCEALS CHAGRIN

Sir Thomas I have no doubt is inwardly as sore and disappointed as a man can be. He would not be human were not this so, and yet he never showed it.

At luncheon he joked away, never serious for a minute.

"I can't see why we do not win. The Shamrock has four captains and the Enterprise only one. You mark my words, the Shamrock is a grand boat. She'll be in before the end of the week."

It was a cheerful luncheon in fact I had no idea that any dry ship could contain such high-spirited individuals and yet all the while defeat was staring at us from separate portholes.

By now the race had become a procession with the Enterprise so far ahead as to remove all competitive interest. Accordingly I fell to talking with Joe Chapple, who told me about the wonders of the original Mexican civilization and then we discussed New York and I listened enthralled to Ex-Commissioner Enright.

THERE'S NO RACE

The Enterprise was forging further and further ahead. You wish to hear about the race. I tell you that there was no race. The Enterprise is a far faster boat than the Shamrock.

When the affair was over I came down into the cabin in which I am writing and Sir Thomas walked in. I started to condole with him.

"Man, have some tea and you will have nothing to complain about."

You remember the story of the Spartan boy and the fox. Well, Sir Thomas today is featuring the first cousin to it. He is the sort of man who will take the blows of fortune right on the chin. He has carried himself very gallantly.

I should not be surprised if he came back again with another boat.

Sir Thomas told me as I left that he was convinced that the Shamrock can do better. I think this is so, but it will require an engine to beat the Enterprise.

BROTHER SUED OVER BEATING

A suit seeking $10,000 damages for an alleged beating was filed by Anthony Hackett, of 118 Flavel street, and a capias with bail fixed at $300 was granted by Judge Frank P. Patterson, against Thomas M. Hackett, of 6201 Alder street, in Common Pleas Court. The Hacketts are brothers.

Anthony Hackett averred that as a legatee under a will he went on June 11 last with two real estate men to the Alder street house to estimate its value in connection with a partition proceeding. Thomas Hackett, he charged, attacked him in the cellar, scratching his face and neck, kicking him in the stomach and hitting him on the head with a bucket.

Galaxy of Royalty On Way to Britain

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—There is no indication that it means pressure on the Prince of Wales, but a galaxy of foreign royalty is in Britain or on the way: Queen Victoria, of Spain, and her two pretty daughters; Princess Ingrid, of Sweden; Queen Maud and the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway; the Queen of the Belgians; former Queen Amelie, of Portugal; Prince and Princess Takamatsu, of Japan.

Spain's Richest Man Seeks Throat Relief

SANTANDER, Spain, Sept. 16 (AP)—The country's richest man has no voice. Francisco Cambo, financier, who declined to be secretary of the treasury, is in Paris undergoing treatment for throat trouble. He is unable to speak.

Two Children Die In Fire, Two Saved

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 16 (INS)—Two small children were burned to death early today and their father severely burned in rescuing two others from their flaming home south of this city.

The father, Clarence Martin, 32, carried Juanita, 9, and Irving, 11, from the burning home. Both he and Juanita were reported badly burned.

Mine-Bomb Flier Under $10,000 Bond

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 16 (AP)—Paul Montgomery, Murphysboro aviator arrested in connection with the bombing from the air of non-union coal mines at Providence, Ky., was ordered removed to the western district of Kentucky by Judge Walter C. Lindley in United States District Court. Montgomery's bond was fixed at $10,000.

$30,000 SAFETY FUND PLEDGED

Representatives of the National Safety Congress today were given $15,000 by the Allegheny County commissioners and the promise of an equal amount from the city after they had requested the money to help defray the expenses of the congress which will be held here beginning September 29.

The appropriation by the commissioners was made at a meeting this morning. Later the committee headed by A. L. Humphrey of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company and E. T. Whiteside, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, called on Mayor Charles H. Kline with a similar request. Mayor Kline said he would recommend City Council provide the money.

POLL OFFICERS' CHOICE NEAR

The redistricting board engaged in enlarging and consolidating election districts of the county will hold its final meeting Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

At that time all lists of election officers for the new districts will have been submitted and the board expects to present petitions for the officers appointments in court Monday.

Judge Harry H. Rowand ruled at the meeting of the commission yesterday that in the cases of election officers who have been convicted of fraud and whose paroles have expired and who have been re-elected to office that the commission has no right to refuse to appoint them in the new districts.

This mooted question was the only matter of import brought up at the meeting of the commission yesterday afternoon.

3 Children Trapped, Die as Home Burns

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 16 (AP).—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin lost their lives last night, trapped in a fire which destroyed the Martin home in Knollwood Park, a suburb. Martin was burned in attempting to rescue the children from the flames, which resulted from an overheated stove.

Knoxville Girl Held In Bad Check Case

This New Tailor Type

Is a Dress Which Will Please Many Women

It has those principles of line which make well-designed frocks of this season so decidedly wearable. And it upholds the tradition of Tailor-Type in the matter of smart simplicity and good taste.

It is Tailor-Type in the more feminine mood of the new season, with a slashed "fringe" of self trimming, and loose skirt panels to give it movement.

In sizes 34 to 44. Priced $39.50.

... Horne's, Second Floor ...

A Most Unusual Offer of

50-Inch Drapery Damask

$1.55 Yard

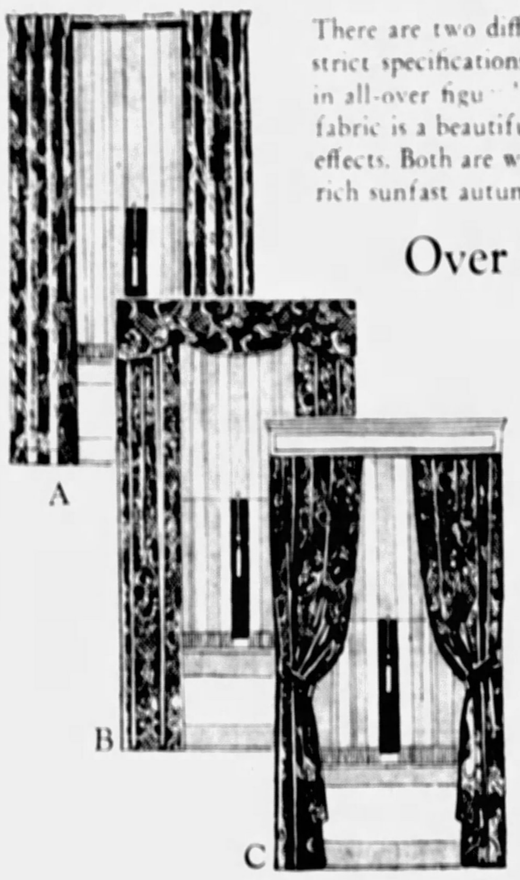
There are two different qualities, made and designed to our own strict specifications. One is a copy of a fine imported brocade . . . in all-over figured design, or figured-and-striped effect. The other fabric is a beautiful shadow pattern in new and lustrous two-tone effects. Both are woven of extra fine cotton and rayon yarns . . . in rich sunfast autumn colorings.



Over Draperies Made to Order

At a Special Price for a Limited Period

Made up in the style illustrated at the left.

A. One pair of hangings with lining but no interlining; making and hooks, $6.00. Covered pole, $1.60. Brackets and rings, $1.25.

B. One pair of over-draperies with valance over all, lined but not interlined; making and brazed rings, band loops included, $9.50. Rod and brackets, 65c.

C. One pair of over-draperies, lined but not interlined; making and brazed rings, band loops included, $6.50. Rod and brackets, 63c. Painted wood cornice, 4½ to 5 inches deep, $12.00.

In each case, material, lining and fitting up not included. Prices are for windows approximately 4 ft. wide and 6 ft. to sill, or 8 ft. to floor. Slightly additional charge for out-of-town orders.

Black-and-White

A Smart Tailored Frock

$16.75

Women who wear black from choice, will like this frock just as it is with white silk-pique vestee and black-and-white enameled flower. And those in mourning will find it a good-looking dress with these touches removed, for it has such a smart cut as to skirt and Lucile Paray sleeves that its adornment will scarcely be missed.

Its firm crepe faille makes it a dress for service, too, so it will be practical for street wear, for the club, for school room and business.

In regular sizes 34 to 44, and small women's sizes in between. . . . A feature in the Black and White Dress Section.

... Horne's, Second Floor ...

Wool-Filled Comforts

Made to Our Specifications for this Annual Event

$4.50

Filled with pure clean lamb's wool, soft and fluffy, they provide plenty of warmth without excess weight. Covered with sateen of good, firm quality, and stitched in a diamond pattern.

They are all in one very attractive floral pattern. The color combinations are in excellent taste. The border has one band of the floral pattern between two bands of solid color. Choose from rose, green, gold, orchid and blue.

Full Bed Size, 72x84 Inches.

THIRD ANDREE PARTY BODY RETURNED

Ship Back From White Island Carrying Remains of Fraenkel to Tromsoe

By ARNE KILDAL
International News Service

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 16.—Separated for only a few brief weeks over the space of 33 years, the mortal remains of Salomon August Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Fraenkel were brought together again today.

The body of Fraenkel discovered on White Island by an expedition aboard the steamer Isbjoern was brought to Tromsoe today reverently taken off the vessel in its rude coffin of pine boards and carried to the Tromsoe Hospital where the bodies of Andree and Strindberg found last month by Dr. Gunnar Horn are still being studied by scientists.

DRAPED WITH FLAG

Draped with a Swedish flag Fraenkel's coffin was escorted to the hospital by sailors from the Swedish warship Svenskund waiting here to take the explorers' bodies back to Stockholm for a state funeral. Additional relics of the expedition found by the Isbjoern expedition also will be taken to the hospital for minute investigation.

Knut Stubbendorff, leader of the searching party of journalists which explored White Island, declared he thought the chances of finding a clue to the fate of the lost Italia balloon group headed by Gen. Nobile, good along the west coast of Franz Josef land.

FIND WHITE TIE

Among the remains of Andree's expedition exhibited by Stubendorff in his cabin was a white tie belonging to the Swedish explorer. Found in a batch of frozen letters. Andree apparently had placed it between the paper envelopes to keep it near for wear at festivities which he knew would greet his return to civilization.

100 Prizes at $5	500.00
100 Prizes at $2	200.00
Total (230 Cash Prizes)	$1,500

FOLLOW THESE RULES:

1—Everyone is eligible to participate in the Title Hunt except employes of the Sun-Telegraph and members of their families.

2—Every day from September 7 to October 6, inclusive, ten Ripley "Believe It or Not" pictures (without description) will be published in addition to the regular Ripley feature. The descriptions for each picture will be published in the Classified Ad columns.

3—The Title Hunt consists in finding the descriptions in the Classified Ads, clipping them out, and placing each under the picture to which it refers. The words making up each description will appear as a single unit in one place.

4—Hold all of the pictures until you have thirty complete sets of 10 each—300 pictures in all. Then send them in to Ripley's Title Hunt Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

5—All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 31. No entries will be returned to the sender.

6—$1,500.00 in cash prizes, in accordance with the complete prize list published herewith, will be paid to the persons sending in the most nearly correct and neatest complete set of pictures at the close of the Title Hunt.

7—A committee of judges will be appointed by the Sun-Telegraph to determine the successful contestants. All entrants agree to accept the decisions of the judges as final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

8—It is not necessary to purchase the Sun-Telegraph to compete. This newspaper may be examined at any of its offices or at the public libraries free of charge, and if you wish you may copy or trace the pictures as well as the descriptions from the Sun-Telegraph and then assemble the sets from the copies you have made.

DRASTIC DISARM ACTION URGED ON LEAGUE

Germany, Italy Join Plea Against Security Pact Delaying Arms Reduction

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The voices of two neighbors of France, those of Italy and Germany, today were joined with those of British Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson and others in a plea for drastic measures toward disarmament without waiting for security.

Signor Scialoja, spokesman of the Mussolini government in the absence of Foreign Minister Grandi, declared that Italy is still ready for a disarmament agreement, which will reduce armaments to the very lowest level consistent with national safety.

Closely following upon the address of the Italian statesman, German's foreign minister, Julius Curtius, announced his own emphatic agreement with the principles enunciated by his British and Italian colleagues, in their appeal for the execution of that provision of the Versailles treaty, which commits the victorious powers in the World War to enter an agreement for general reduction of their armed forces.

The position of these leaders—that disarmament is the world's greatest immediate need and must not wait upon security for this realization—is a direct negation of the French thesis that disarmament must follow security.

Great Britain, Italy and Germany also are generally agreed, their spokesmen have indicated, that any scheme for European collaboration to solve the economic problem must be worked out in the League of Nations itself.

$500 BOND SET IN AD PLOT

Louis C. St. Claire, on parole from local courts in an alleged fake advertising venture, and Mrs. May Glaser, 818 North Craig street, were at liberty in $500 bond each today pending a hearing Friday before Magistrate J. J. Connors in Oakland Police Court, charged with being suspicious persons.

The two were arrested after complaints reached Inspector James N. Hoey that merchants were being solicited for advertising in the "Municipal and Industrial Survey and Executive Directory." St. Claire asserts the directory has official indorsement of city authorities, but Hoey says Luther Jones, purported to have signed a letter on city stationery, is a janitor in the office of the bureau of city property.

Two More Arrested In Numbers Drive

With the return of Alderman Martin J. Griffin from a vacation, the drive against numbers writers in the Fifth Ward has been resumed. Constables working out of his office, acting on complaints, yesterday arrested two alleged clearing house ticket sellers, who were jailed in default of $2,500 bail pending hearings tomorrow. Those held are Morris Kart, of 2203 Mahon street, who conducts a confectionery store in Center avenue, and Charles Walker, Negro barber shop proprietor, of 2152 Wylie avenue.

2 Held as Suspects In Auto Theft Ring

Patsy Dalessandro, 20, of 1927 Woodward avenue, and George Petoucci, 20, 645 Chess street, arrested at their homes this morning by city detectives in connection with automobile thefts, were held for investigation by Magistrate Thomas Jones in Morals Court. Detectives testified the defendants are members of a gang who, after stealing automobiles, strip them in a vacant lot in Hays.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

Ted Healy is m. c. in the RKO Hour on WCAE at 10:30 tonight. Mary Brian, coy film star whose acting we pair with that of Greta Garbo, steps into Paramount studios at 10:15 to entertain WJAS fans. The Irish Washerwoman gives Westinghouse Salute to the Laundry Industry a very clean aspect on KDKA at 10 p. m. We shall dial Philco Symphony at 9:30 to hear Howard Barlow's orchestra do the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" and the First Movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony." Grogan Organ on KDKA at the same hour lists Pilgrims Chorus and Prize Song from "Die Meistersinger."

STUDIO IN HOME

"The Something for Everyone" program on WJAS every morning originates in the home of Ernest W. Naftzger, master of ceremonies. Naftzger is probably the only New Yorker with a complete radio studio in his home. Its acoustics have been improved by heavy drapes. A control booth with amplifying apparatus and control instruments opens out into the studio through a double plate glass window. Mrs. Naftzger makes coffee every morning for the artists and announcers.

PACKARD EIGHT
DE LUXE
Finest of all the world's Fine Cars
NOW PRICED
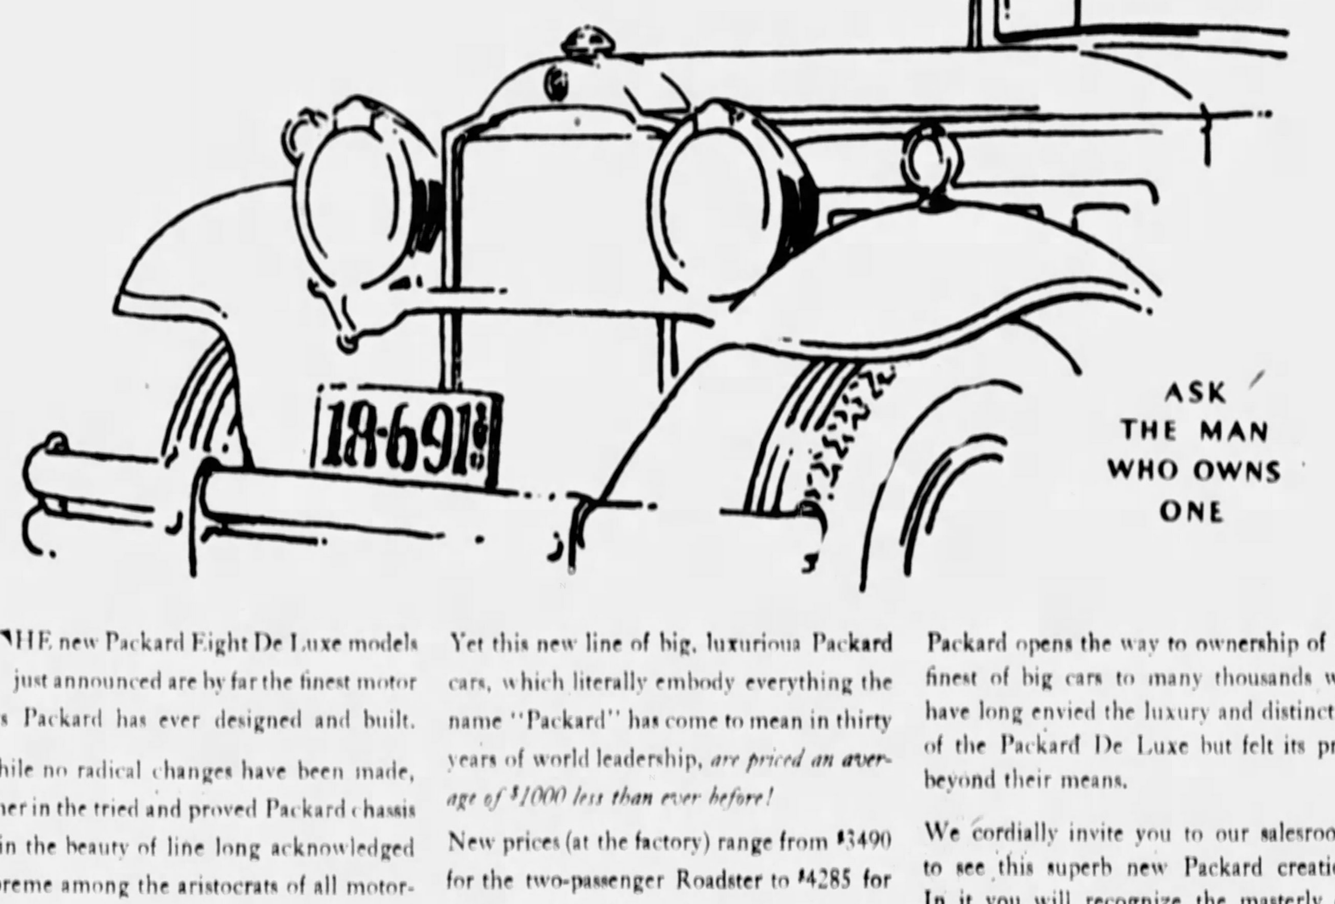
LESS



ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

THE new Packard Eight De Luxe models just announced are by far the finest motor cars Packard has ever designed and built.

While no radical changes have been made, either in the tried and proved Packard chassis or in the beauty of line long acknowledged supreme among the aristocrats of all motordom, the new model nevertheless surpasses all previous Packards in sheer excellence, in refinement of detail, and in all those things which spell true luxury of transportation.

Yet this new line of big, luxurious Packard cars, which literally embody everything the name "Packard" has come to mean in thirty years of world leadership, are priced an average of $1000 less than ever before!

New prices (at the factory) range from $3490 for the two-passenger Roadster to $4285 for the beautiful and luxurious seven-passenger Sedan-Limousine. The equivalent models in the last series ranged from $4585 to $5350.

By this exceptional reduction in list prices, Packard opens the way to ownership of the finest of big cars to many thousands who have long envied the luxury and distinction of the Packard De Luxe but felt its price beyond their means.

We cordially invite you to our salesrooms to see this superb new Packard creation. In it you will recognize the masterly designing and superior craftsmanship upon which Packard reputation is founded. Ride in it and you will find your dreams of motor car performance and luxury surpassed.

TED HEALY, MARY BRIAN STAR ON AIR

Strongest Appeal
The Commonplace
Sports Galore
Radio Good Will

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—When the archdukes of the air bring the record of their achievements up to date they will, unless my crystal ball is no longer dependable, pin their choicest adjectives on the year 1930.

Louis Reid.

Modest men, the archdukes. But they are also business men. They invariably leave the megaphones to those who engage passage on the radio sea, contenting themselves with the not disagreeable job of the purser. The click of the cash register is the sweetest sound to them, and the volume and length of the click depends upon the appeal of the journeys they offer on the air waves.

The appeal this year has been the most alluring since Marconi flashed his incredible "s" from Newfoundland to Ireland. It has even been more potent, more fascinating to those carcuppers who would go places and hear things than that which featured so divertingly the gladiatorial voice-hurling of Hoover and Al. For one thing the archdukes have never been more enterprising. For another they have, through pomp and circumstance, been handed a spectacular array of attractions.

London Is Calling Often on the Air

Beginning at that chilling January daybreak when they led King George into the parlors of the republic, the radio men have been occupied with a succession of ear-startling events. No longer is London an adventure waiting just around the corner from the Windsor chair. It is calling regularly and often on the loudspeakers. No longer are Holland and Germany the incredible cries of miracle-workers. The still small voice of Australia has been heard. Italy is about to penetrate the ear drums. And I would not be surprised were Abyssinia and Zululand to tumble out of the ether before Big Ben ushers in a new year.

What was once sensational is now commonplace. Prime ministers are sandwiched between prizefighters and cabinet members between crooners. A world figure is no more unusual than a world champion, a trans-Atlantic flier no more novel than a cross-country dealer in antique songs.

Everything is grist that comes to the radio mills from rulers of countries to kings of jazz, from lively bulletins of boxers to deadly talks on the tariff, from Broadway to Main Street, from the pulpit to the playing field, from the log cabins to the White House.

It is, however, in the field of sports that 1930 stands out with special significance to the armchairs. To the businessmen of the air belongs the glory. A bow to them! A salaam even, if the rugs have not been rolled up. And what price glory? The price, it seems to me, of unlimited power, of unvisioned conquest. The broadcasters in their desire to bring you the hoofs of Gallant Fox, the putts of Bobby Jones, the polo play of Hitchcock the sportsmanship of Lipton, even the "foul" cries of the ponderous palookas, have sacrificed what would seem at first glance a Coolidge era fortune.

Radio Men Have Eyes On Bigger Bankrolls

Very clever, the broadcasters. In clamping down the windows of the box office and rejecting the hard cash of the sponsors who really pay the piper they have increased the value of their property. They have created good will by enlarging their audiences. They have won new friends for radio while they kept their old ones.

As a result, they will reap next season, or we are talking more than ever through our racketeering cap, a dollar for every dime they took in last year. And last year, you may recall, the N. B. C. alone took in $15,000,000 over their counters.

* * *

Horse racing was unknown on the air last year. This summer, thanks to the persuasive heels of Gallant Fox, and the still more persuasive voice of Earle Sande, horse racing can be reckoned one of the most thrilling of broadcasts. Continuing its sports pioneering, radio has also recorded for the first time a national golf tournament, an international polo meet and the efforts of Sir Thomas Lipton to take home the cup for the fastest yacht.

RELIEF FOR STOMACH ILLS

And other health-destroying ailments that have kept thousands of sufferers in misery and despair now seen in modern discovery BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUMS. How little we think the stomach controls High Blood Pressure and most all supposedly incurable diseases! Every organ in the body receives its allowance and maintenance from the stomach. Why do we impose on it? Nobody cares much—because it has to take what you give it and say nothing until some future date. You get a message from the kidneys—Bright's Disease, Hardening of the Arteries; a message from the Heart—Myocarditis, with what you call Rheumatism produced by toxins in the blood stream; Stiff Joints and painful Muscles. The Liver always trying to do what the Stomach fails to accomplish. Give up the fight and the patient drifts into Anemia. The time has come to stop drugging and abusing this wonderful organ that can digest all but itself. Don't you believe it is time to give some special thought to these facts and eliminate this stomach drugging, which you know is wrong, neglecting the only sure and effective avenue of medication—the blood stream? BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUMS are used universally in the treatment of these supposedly incurable diseases (35,000 given in Pittsburgh past 7 years) and can be had only at the

50 MILES ROAD WORK FINISHED

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A total of 50.69 miles of surfaced highway was completed last week, Samuel Eckels, chief engineer of the state department of highways, announces. Of this, the contract mileage was 41.78, while the work finished by maintenance forces totaled 8.91 miles.

The week's record maintained the 50-mile a week pace which has been continued through the last three months with only one break caused by the Labor Day observance. It increased the season total to 955.71 miles of new pavement.

A total of 15,101 men are now employed by contractors and 9,325 by the department maintenance force, while at this stage of the season last year only 15,800 men were employed on both forces.

ILLINOIS MINE REBELS BANNED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Members of the so-called insurgent faction of the United Mine Workers of America were denied seats at the opening of the Illinois Federation of Labor convention.

The credentials committee, in announcing the banning of the miners, said it had no other choice in view of the adverse ruling by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

The situation resulted from actions of the credentials committee in refusing seats to members of the Pishwick-Howat-Walker miners' group, who last spring rebelled against the leadership of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and held their own convention at Springfield while the older body was in session at Indianapolis.

Woman Probation Officer Marries

BEAVER, Sept. 16.—Miss Amanda Holt, probation officer of Beaver County for several years, was married yesterday to Orlando M. Carse, of Cleveland. The Rev. Grant S. Pollock, of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, officiated. The bride has resigned her position.

Raid Home, Woman Held on Rum Charge

CONNELLSVILLE, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Amsia Bloom posted $200 in police court after her home was raided by six city policemen. Two kegs of moonshine liquor and nearly 200 bottles of home brew were reported confiscated.

Who Killed Bob Adair?

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The police receive word that a murder has been committed on the Adair estate. Investigating, the message is denied by the members of the eccentric household. A maniacal laugh is heard upstairs.

Now Go on With the Story.

CHAPTER II.

Without another word Captain Blake made for the stairs and mounted swiftly, followed by Sergeant Jardin and Robin Dale. Dr. Wattles, probably to remain near those he knew followed as quickly as he could.

On the upper landing they found themselves in a spacious square hallway, dim-lighted as the one below, with doors on every side leading into sleeping chambers. Dale afterwards came out and made a careful study of the layout of the rooms when he began to consider the possible commission of the crime they soon discovered.

A balustrade ran about the stairway, forming a complete enclosure, with the wall on one side, except at the landing. In the portion of the hall furthest from the landing framed in an open doorway, stood a man laughing like a maniac. When all of Captain Blake's party had mounted the stairs the man came toward them, his laughter dying, though he was still chuckling idiotically to himself. He had staring, glassy eyes, unkempt hair that stood out in huge tufts upon his head, still completely attired in clothes that hung loosely about his tall, gaunt form, and an odd habit of stretching forth long fingers that looked like talons and then compressing them tensely into a fist.

"I telephoned! I, Gerald Adair! Did you get my pretty message?" and for a brief second he howled again in crazy glee.

They knew immediately they were in the presence of one who was half-demented. He pointed a long skinny finger toward a door in the corner to the left of the stair landing.

"You want to see a pretty sight? Go in there! My handsome brother, Bob . . . he forgot that fish have scales that choke, that dogs that bark will bite . . . ha, ha! ha! . . . that beauty is only the devil's fruit, an apple with a worm inside that grows to be a snake with poison fangs! Go and see his handsome face turned to soggy clay . . . I telephoned you for that!"

A creepy feeling was coming over Robin Dale. Pop Beacon had been right, this was an almost unearthly household where you expected any moment to have long, bony arms protrude from out of the very walls. The others must have felt the same way, for they all stood without moving as long as Gerald Adair continued his crazy talk. He finished with a burst of laughter. Captain Blake went to the door Gerald had pointed out and threw it open. It was black inside. He fumbled around for a light-switch.

"You are seeking light?" chuckled Gerald Adair. "Seek light only with the candle of righteousness . . . we stay on earth only to wash away the sins we are born with, not to enjoy the pleasures of godless men . . . I'll get the light!"

He shambled back to his room and came forth with a burning candle. He handed it to Captain Blake, who then led the way into the corner room.

The light of the candle threw long, slanting shadows about the square room. The bay-windows formed recesses on two sides of the room, on the third was a blank wall and on the fourth a closed door. Dale took these features in at a glance and then his eye was attracted and held by the object which confronted him in the eerie light.

Seated in a wide arm-chair, a huge book resting in his lap, head slumped forward, arms dangling loosely over the wooden arms, was the remains of Bob Adair. He was in his shirt sleeves and a dark red smudge over his heart told of the wound. A few paces from him on the floor lay a revolver. Jardin picked this up, examined it and whispered to Captain Blake, and then put it into his pocket. Blake and Dr. Wattles went to the body. After a moment they lifted the book and placed it on the table nearby, where the police captain had stood the candle. As Dr. Wattles made his examination Robin Dale bent over and peered at the open pages of the book.

The book was opened to pages in the back where they were ruled and divided, with alphabetical tabulations, to be used for keeping the records of a family. Dale saw that it was the Holy Bible. The pages upon which he gazed held the index B, and the third name under this letter was Bob Adair, born March 3, 1899, son of Dedrick and Martha Adair. There was a space left under each name for an honorarium of words. A pen had dropped into the crotch of the book as though the dead man had been writing. There was something written under his name, and from the wording Robin Dale sensed that Bob had been penning the words when death overtook him.

For a long while Dale studied the strange words, couched in vague language, trying to piece something out of them. They told that the strange creeds by which this family lived had been as much a part of Bob as these others who were still alive . . . a hard, relentless adherence to a narrow code of penance and expiation.

Thus ran the epilogue which Bob Adair had been writing for himself and never finished: He gave His only begotten Son that the world might be free of sin. And then who am I, but a poor sinner? But in the beginning He made the earth in six days and the seventh was a day of rest. Then again on the eighth day (the first come round again) man could continue quittance for his sins . . . and this atonement must be even as the letters of the skrit beginning with A and going . . .

There it came to and end. There was something a little more than human about it all or something less. Dale heard the doctor speaking to Blake.

"Dead since 1 o'clock . . . it went through the heart, fired from about 10 or 12 feet."

Dale looked at the body. It was directly facing the door. It was impossible for anyone to have entered without Bob Adair seeing the intruder. Dale went to the only other door in the room, the one which was closed. He found it was locked from that side and upon opening it saw that it led into the bathroom. Across the bathroom was another door leading into the adjoining chamber, but that door was also closed.

Then they all heard the queer, creaking sounds for the first time. An uncanny, intermittent creak like the feet of giants upon loose boards, only there were no accompanying thuds of footfalls.

TENTH STREET AND PENN AVENUE

M'GOVERN RAPS BOND INCREASE

Amid scathing denunciations by Commissioner Charles McGovern, the Allegheny County Commissioners today purchased bonds totaling $2,300,000 from the Sinking Fund Commission to carry out projects in connection with the county airport and to purchase voting machines.

At the meeting an amendment was passed to add $50,000 more to the $1,000,000 bond issue to complete the airport. What the added amount was for was not announced.

ASKS LEGAL OPINION

Before voting McGovern demanded that an opinion relative to the legality of the procedure be read into the record by the county solicitor.

Acting County Solicitor M. B. Lesher said:

"The matter of purchasing bonds from the sinking fund commission was approved by Mr. Dithrich and myself. Aside from this, the commissioners approved the plan. It is entirely legal and above board."

"SOMETHING WRONG"

To this, McGovern said:

"For $2,000,000 we were to get a completed airport. We didn't get it. Something is wrong. I have opposed such gross expenditures in connection with this project in the past. I haven't changed my opinion in the least."

Of the amount acted upon today, according to Armstrong, $1,250,000 is to be used for purchase of voting machines.

The sinking fund commisson is composed of the three commissioners, the county treasurer and controller.

If the County Commissioners act favorably upon a suggestion made by Controller Robert G. Woodside, the County Department of Public Works will be permitted to bid for work on the new county-city airport.

Woodside said:

"As a measure to relieve the local unemployment situation and to give local men work in preference to outsiders, I make the suggestion that the Public Works Department be permitted to enter bids."

VANDALS RIP UP AIRPORT

A special detail of county police was on duty today at the City-County airport site, Mifflin Township, after some unknown person tore up 1,000 surveyors' stakes and otherwise desecrated the property.

Norman F. Brown, county director of public works, ordered assignment of the officers to the airport after attaches there said the stakes had been torn up and scattered hither and yon across the runways and port limits.

Due to this state of affairs, Brown said, the surveying will have to be done over again, adding materially to the increased cost of the project. The stakes were pulled up Friday last, according to Brown, but he did not decide upon stationing officers there until this morning.

Within the next 10 days or two weeks, the director announced, his department will be ready to advertise for bids on several of the structures to be erected in connection with the airport.

Included in the list are runways, field limit markers and other improvements.

The police guard will be continued indefinitely, according to Brown.

REGISTRATION POLLS OPEN

Residents of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Clairton and Duquesne who did not register September 4, may do so today, providing they have a tax receipt issued since November 3, 1928. After today, the only chance to be registered will be October 4.

Pittsburgh registrars will sit at polling places today from 8 to 11 a. m. and from 5 to 11 p. m. Pittsburgh time. Registrars in the other three cities will sit from 8 to 10 a. m., from noon to 3 p. m. and from 5 to 11 p. m. Pittsburgh time.

Coste Kisses Girl Who Returned Lost Map

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Louise Stef, 16, can tell the girls back home in Portsmouth, N. H., she was kissed by the man who has become one of France's national heroes—Capt. Dieudonne Coste.

Soon after the flier and Maurice Bellonte landed here on their tour of the United States, Louise and her brother, John, 13, returned to Capt. Coste a map which had fallen from his plane as it sped over Portsmouth on its flight from Paris to New York. Coste thanked them both, shook John's hand and gave Louise the French accolade, a kiss on each cheek.

Tire Co. Official Dies in Heart Attack

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Thomas S. Lindsey, of Yonkers, N. Y., vice president of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, died of a heart attack here last night. He was 25 years old.

CRATER SEARCH EXTENDS HERE

Pittsburgh was included today in the widespread search for Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater, of New York, missing since August 6 when he attended a New York night club. Circulars bearing a detailed description of the jurist were received by Michael Feeney, in charge of the missing persons bureau from John O'Brien, chief inspector of New York police.

The missing jurist is 41 years old, six feet tall, weights 185 pounds and has mixed gray hair parted in the middle, the description states.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS)—While the county grand jury today continued its investigation of the disappearance more than a month ago of Justice Joseph Force Crater, plans were made to formally announce a reward of $5,000 by the city for information leading to the whereabouts of the missing jurist.

SIX 'NUMBERS' WRITERS FINED

Six self-admitted numbers writers arrested yesterday on suspicious person charges were fined by Magistrate Charles Papale in East End police court today.

Charles Bierrein, 26, Negro, of 273 Fitzpatrick street; James Conforti, 30, of 327 Mingo street, and his brother, Joseph, 27, of the same address, were fined $100 each.

All were arrested by city detectives at Murray avenue and Forbes street. All three admitted writing "numbers" on the New York clearing house pool.

Peter Palmer, 29, of 227 Renfrew street; Lawrence Treneo, 30, of 523 Larimer avenue, and James Balsafico, of 527 Larimer avenue, arrested at Fifth and Highland avenues, were also fined. Palmer was assessed $100 and his two accomplices $50 each.

Described as a "number racketeer" who refused to pay "hits," Leonard Bechtold, of 469 Evergreen road, Millvale, is to have a final hearing tomorrow before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley.

Bechtold was arrested on information supplied by Walter Flowers, of Brookline, who said he bet for $1, September 11, but that Flowers refused to pay him. He was charged with conducting a lottery.

At a preliminary hearing, when he was released on $2,500 bail, Bechtold denied having ever seen Flowers. He also said he was not engaged in writing "numbers."

Klein Urges Study Of Consumer Credit

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(INS)—Study of the field of consumer credit from the standpoint of the individual is an important and sizeable factor in national economy, according to a statement issued today by Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, in connection with the meeting of the American Association of Personal Finance Companies, to be held here September 23 to 26.

Farmers Warned To Get Seed Corn

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Farmers in drought areas have been advised by the Department of Agriculture to select or purchase seed corn now to prevent the possibility of a shortage of suitable seed next year.

Unless farmers in the most seriously affected drought areas recognize the situation promptly and take steps to meet it, the department said, "the ill effect of the drought may not stop with the current crops."

A Statement by the Cadillac Motor Car Company

Concerning the Cadillac and La Salle Program

THE bringing out of the Cadillac V-16 a few months ago and now the new Cadillac and La Salle V-Eights, and early in October the new Cadillac V-12, may give rise to some question as to our manufacturing program.

It is our desire that Cadillac and La Salle owners and the motoring public be apprised of the facts.

The La Salle will remain companion car to Cadillac. It was so introduced, as such it has greatly succeeded and as such it will continue.

Obviously the number of motor cars which any manufacturer may sell in a given price field is finally governed by the ability of the public to buy them.

Cadillac cars having gained almost universal acceptance in the finest car field, any considerable expansion must be through cultivation of a broader market in lower price ranges.

Our experience has been in building fine cars. The Cadillac organization could not adhere to its fine car ideals and successfully produce a low priced car, but through a more complete coverage of the fine car field it was apparent that we could give greater value and appreciably lower prices.

For the broader market, therefore, we created the La Salle out of our Cadillac experience and developed it as a quality car.

For the highest priced fields we have produced the sixteen-cylinder Cadillac and the twelve-cylinder Cadillac.

And between the very broad market for the La Salle and the relatively narrow market for twelve and sixteen cylinder cars, there is a large market for Cadillac V-8's.

These lines of cars contribute to one another a tremendous influence in sales, a marked advance in values and make possible the low prices at which Cadillac and La Salle cars are sold.

And this, briefly, is the reasoning in Cadillac's program.

Were it not for La Salle, all Cadillacs would be higher in price; and were it not for the Cadillacs, La Salle prices would necessarily be so high as to defeat the purpose for which the La Salle was designed.

Each of these lines is dependent one upon the other—the Cadillac V-16, the Cadillac V-12, the Cadillac V-8, and their companion car, the La Salle.

PAPER STRIKE LOOMS IN CUBA

HAVANA, Sept. 16 (AP).—Possible cessation of journalistic activities in Cuba was threatened by newspapermen's refusal to serve as the government's strike plant publishing Kansas's anti-administration comic weekly.

The printing plant was closed by government raiders. Earlier in the day the Court of Instruction had refused to press criminal charges against Orfilio Gainaurd, publisher, on the ground that such a procedure would be unconstitutional in a republic admitting freedom of the press.

The Reporters' Association of Cuba declared it possible that the major dailies of Cuba would close in sympathy with Machado's management, but no statement to this effect could be had from the publishers of several influential Havana newspapers.

SEEK KISSEL FORECLOSURE

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16 (AP).—Application for foreclosure of a first mortgage on the Kissel Motor Car Company holdings at Hartford, Wis., was filed in Federal Court by Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago, trustee for holders of bonds issued by the company April 1, 1922.

The bond issued was for $150,000 and the company granted a mortgage covering its plant patents, formulas and trade marks as security for the indebtedness.

Chute Jumper Held For Theft of Plane

CUMBERLAND, Md., Sept. 16 (AP).—A 13-months-old warrant charging theft of an airplane was served here last night on Carl Goughenour, 26, who was arrested for disorderly conduct. He is accused of taking a monoplane belonging to John H. Abbott, a former Cumberland policeman, the last night.

Goughenour disappeared with the plane, police said, was smashed in the vicinity of Uniontown, Pa., and was not seen here until

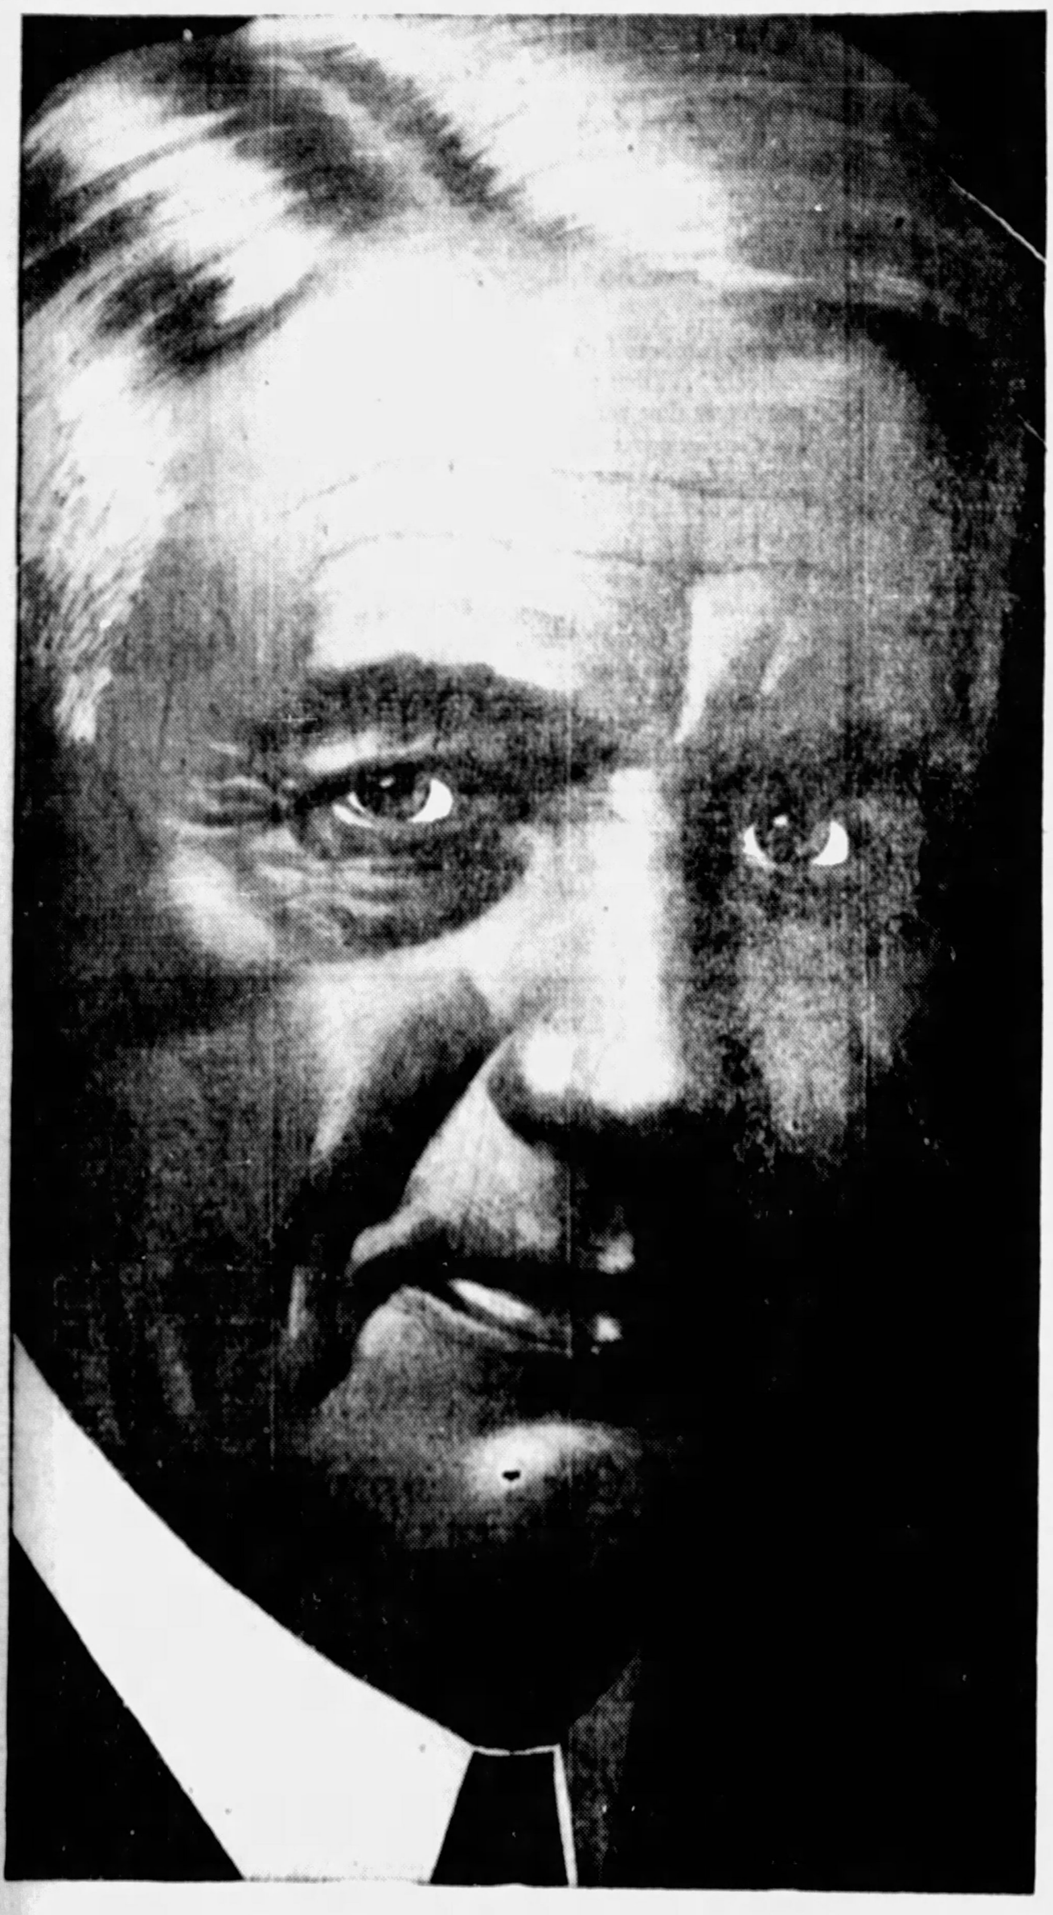
RACINE, WISCONSIN



Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited General Samuel McRoberts to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The following is the statement of General McRoberts:

"MAKING FRIENDS AND HOLDING THEM

—is the secret of success in business"

Says

GENERAL SAMUEL McROBERTS

Chairman of the Board, Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company

Director, Armour & Co., American Sugar Refining Co., National Surety Co., Kansas City Southern Railway; Brig. General, A. E. F.

"Making friends and holding them, by a friendly up-to-date usefulness, is the secret of success in business. This axiom has been the guiding force in the progress of the Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company. And it is obviously the guiding force in your business—as evidenced by your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos."

Samuel McRoberts

LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray.

NEW YORK

When you discover a critical traveler . . . you'll usually find a Statler guest.

Why? Because Statler values and service meet his test. Because Statler rates never fluctuate with the flow of business. Because in a variety of restaurants — ranging from dining room to lunchroom or cafeteria — the food satisfies his exacting taste.

He is as sure of these as of a private bath with every room . . . circulating ice water . . . attractive furnishings . . . cleanliness and prompt and cheerful service.

And he knows, too, that he will get extra conveniences in every Statler — a morning newspaper under the door, the luxurious comfort of an inner-spring hair mattress, a bed-head reading lamp, a full-length mirror, radio reception to enliven the idle hours and access to a well-stocked library.

As a critical traveler, you, too, will find that Statler Hotels meet your test and that always your satisfaction is guaranteed.

FORMER WOMAN DEAN DIES

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Lucy Belle Boggess Bassel, 70, former dean of women at Broaddus College and one of the most prominent college instructors in the state, died at the home of her son-in-law, Earl H. Belcher, of Westfield, N. J. Pneumonia was given as the cause of death.

She was a native of Lumberport and was the widow of Burr Bassel of Lost Creek. She retired from active duty at Broaddus two years ago.

The body will be brought here and taken to the home of a niece, Mrs. J. E. Wilson.

Chain Store Official Hurt in Auto Wreck

Red Cross Formed In San Domingo

SANTO DOMINGO, Sept. 16.—(INS)—Formation of a Dominican Red Cross committee to take over entirely the work of caring for the sufferers from the recent disastrous hurricane was announced here today. The committee will be headed by President Trujillo, and will contain members of the diplomatic corps.

MEXICAN FETE BOMB HURTS 5

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16 (AP).—Five persons were injured seriously here when what was believed to be a bomb exploded in the Plaza De La Constitution, where thousands were celebrating the anniversary of Mexican independence.

The bomb exploded shortly after 10 p. m., a little before the time President Ortiz Rubio intended to appear on the balcony of the National palace and repeat into the radio the "Grito De Dolores," Mexican independence cry.

The explosion was near the entrance to La Avendia Cinco De Mayo, on the opposite side of the plaza from the National palace. About 50 persons witnessed the blast.

NO FRIEND LIKE AN OLD FRIEND

For thirty-five years millions have shown preference for Shredded Wheat over all other cereal foods—and it's so easy to understand why. It's the whole wheat in its most digestible form. The crisp, crunchy shreds encourage thorough chewing—and the more you chew it the better you like it. So easy to serve a quick breakfast because it is ready-cooked. Delicious for any meal.

EUROPE PLANTS FORD'S PLAN

I am looking over French plants and deciding what to do.

I expect to build a plant here but as yet nothing definite has been decided. I shall use the same motor and the same model car as in America and shall pay the same wages proportionately as in Detroit.

I certainly think the French need higher wages when I see men making a dollar and 12 cents a day.

THINKING OF HOUSEHEATING?

About this time of the year, many of us begin to think of the ash-carrying, furnace tending days that are not far off. Certainly not a very pleasant thought because playing nurse-maid to a lazy furnace and janitor for its dirt and soot is not the most desirable way we can think of to spend your spare hours at home during the coming winter.

Burn Gas in your Present Furnace

Install a Roberts Gas Heating Unit and enjoy real comfort through gas heating. Know the pleasure of getting up in the morning and dressing in a warm, comfortable room without so much as a single trip to the basement. A Thermostat upstairs does all the furnace-tending and there's no ashes, soot or dirt.

We will gladly send our house-heating man to furnish estimates on installation and your monthly bills.

BYRD TRAFFIC WEEK SPEAKER

Commander Richard E. Byrd will be one of the chief speakers at a traffic safety spectacle in the University of Pittsburgh Stadium.

This announcement was made in connection with a request to Council for $7,500 additional funds. This request will be considered late today at a meeting of the Finance Committee.

Pittsburgh's Safety Week activities will be duplicated throughout Western Pennsylvania during the week of September 29, when the National Safety Congress will be held here.

Eighty-eight chairmen have been named to direct activities of the various committees, the events opening with safety sermons on September 28. The program will include activities for industries, schools and homes. Scoreboards in each community will record daily accidental injuries.

A special committee of local house organ editors is arranging to fete 150 editors to be in attendance during the congress. A dinner and dance at the Riverview Inn, October 3, will be the feature attraction. Inspection trips will be other events.

Council Gets Airport Payment Ordinance

The last legal obstacle to the turning over by the city of $500,000 for the municipal airport is being removed by Council. The necessary agreement ordinance was introduced yesterday. The bonds have been sold, and the money is available.

The amount represents the city's share of the project in full, unless additional financing arrangements are made to complete the airport in the future.

'Golden Dawn' Held Prize Cocktail

The recipe for the winning drink is simple: One quarter orange juice, one quarter apricot brandy, one quarter calvados, one quarter gin, and shake well.

READY TO OPEN IMPROVED ROAD

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang said today the section of the Boulevard of the Allies between Emily and Wilmot streets, now under construction, will be opened to the public Saturday.

This section of the improvement cost about $180,000, it was said. Council will make a trip over the improved part and give attention to other needed improvements, including a uniform lighting system, it was said.

Gangsters Slay Man Who Visioned Death

DETROIT, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A man who came out of hiding three weeks ago and told friends he feared he had not long to live, was shot to death last night in a new outbreak of gun war in Detroit. He was Tony Gravina, 35, a grocer who has no police record.

Gravina was one of two victims of guns in the city last night. The other was Benjamin J. Koles, a detective for the Grand Trunk Railroad, whose body was found in a railroad yard.

LET CONTRACT FOR ANNEX

The general contract for the erection of the new building of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania was awarded today to the David T. Riffle Company for approximately $80,000. The structure embraces an auditorium, exhibition halls, library and book stacks and will be added to the present foyer of the building at Parkman avenue and Bigelow boulevard.

It will be completed in eight months.

The Historical Society will spend about $100,000 in the building and its equipment. Of this sum $40,000 was appropriated by the state. Announcement of the contract was made by William H. Stevenson, president of the society. Other members of the building committee, directing the improvement, are Judge A. B. Reid, O. S. Decker, John E. Potter and R. M. Ewing.

North Side Church Aid Will Meet

The Woman's Missionary Society of the McClure Avenue Presbyterian Church meets at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the home of Mrs. Edward G. Lang, Wilkesboro avenue. The Esther Bible Class will have charge of devotional services. Mrs. Selby F. Vance, of Ben Avon, will speak on "The Foreign Mission Opportunities of the Church."

Beer Taken in Raid Ordered Destroyed

No one has claimed ownership of 7,080 bottles of beer seized in a building at Twenty-fourth and Smallman streets, August 11, and Federal Judge Robert M. Gibson today signed an order authorizing the destruction of the brew.

KELVINATOR'S latest and greatest achievement . . . the new YUKON model

$174.50 INSTALLED

TO YOU, Kelvinator presents the new Yukon Model as the crowning achievement of sixteen years of leadership in electric refrigeration development. Here is quality refrigeration at the price countless thousands of families have been waiting to pay.

The Yukon has real beauty—the beauty of massive strength plus finely proportioned design. The exterior finish, on rust proof steel, is special white enamel—a Kelvinator development. Chrome finish hardware harmonizes with the cabinet design. Inside, the Yukon is white porcelain, with all corners rounded.

FIVE CUBIC FEET OF FOOD STORAGE SPACE

There are five cubic feet of interior space—over nine square feet of shelf room—ice cube capacity of four pounds at a freezing (42 generous sized cubes).

Freezing speed is adjustable to five positions, regulating the rate of freezing in the preparation of all kinds of frozen desserts and dainties. There is a conveniently placed defrosting switch and heavy glass defrosting pan.

You need not be a refrigeration expert to realize that the new Yukon Model is an amazing value. One look at its substantial proportions, its gleaming finish, the thickness of its heavy door, the roominess of its interior—and you will know that here is the electric refrigerator you have been waiting to buy, at the price you have wanted to pay. You can see it today—come in.

Purchase of the New Yukon Model is made easy by Kelvinator's ReDisCo Monthly Budget Plan, providing for convenient monthly payments.

IN THESE MAGIC DAYS OF 1930 would you send out engraved cards for this SOIREE DE DANSANT?

Would you dare offer the music of Vincent Lopez on the old-time gramophone for the edification and amusement of your guests as they gaily tripped the merry fox trot? Hardly. Even the full-sectioned band of Paul Whiteman would sound like the original Van Eps Trio on the old wax cylinder. Yet, many a home that can afford fashionable furniture still has an old form-fitting rocker tucked away in the spare room. Why not consider the appeal of fashion-in-furniture?

2 HELD IN 'STILL MURDER' QUIZ

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 16—(INS.)—Discovery of the bullet-riddled body of 20-year-old Anthony Madakis in Dancer's Woods near an abandoned still, resulted in the arrest today of two alleged companions of the dead youth.

The prisoners, Jack Kraus, 38, and Joseph Davak, 26, admit driving to the woods with the victim, but deny any knowledge of the shooting.

Police have evolved the theory that Madakis attempted to hijack the still operators and was shot by one of the guards.

PLANE CRASHES, PILOT HURT

BEDFORD, Pa., Sept. 16.—Pilot James Suddenrolla escaped with painful bruises and lacerations when his challenger airplane went into a nose dive and crashed in a field a mile east of here.

The plane was demolished. It was flown here from Philadelphia. Flying at too low an altitude is thought to have been responsible for the crash.

Heart Attack Kills Brownsville Man

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 16.—William D. Delaney, 65, secretary of Brownsville Lodge No. 51, I. O. O. F., for the last 12 years, dropped dead near his home of a heart attack. He leaves a brother, John H. Delaney, Pittsburgh, and two sisters and a brother here.

MINE POLICIES RECOMMENDED

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 16—(AP.)—When the ninth biennial convention of District 7 of the United Mine Workers convened here, President Michael Hartneady recommended in his biennial report the following policies for the coming two years:

Raising compensation laws of state to standards of other states.

Compensation for any and all injuries on property of employer.

Miners' asthma to be included in compensation.

Non-compensation period to be cut from 7 to 3 days after injury.

Old age pension bill to be passed by Legislature.

Increase in mothers' pension fund so all in need can be aided.

2 Women Held In Liquor Raid

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Barbara O'Dell, of Farrell, and Mrs. Nannie Thomas, of Wheatland, were arrested in liquor raids made by county authorities. Mrs. O'Dell, a second offender, had 15 bottles of beer, a half-gallon of liquor and 75 gallons of mash when the raid was made. Officers had made two "buys" on Mrs. Thomas.

Woman Dies in Fall at Home

50,000 LAYMEN WILL GATHER HERE

Trio Sought in Series of Holdups

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

We know of a case which should interest a curious physician. The case is a child of a few years, a pupil in a suburban school. In classroom she refuses to talk. When teacher asks a question she hangs her head in embarrassment and shuts her lips. She is, otherwise, bright and above average. In her written work she excels. She is in the second grade now and spent two years in the first grade, where she was flunked, probably because she refused to speak out. She has an elder sister and an elder brother, in advanced grades, who answer classroom questions readily and are good pupils. At recess they take her to the school playgrounds and here she forgets her silence. At home, too, she is a quick conversationalist, and her mother cannot understand the situation.

To a layman the case seems potentially tragic in itself—but there is more to it. The other day the child's younger sister went to school for the first time—in the first grade. And she, too, refuses to talk in the classroom.

We made a mistake when we made public the offer of the Aliquippa gentleman to balance a lawn mower and a paper cone on his nose. Now comes another person who gives as reference Detectives Frank Dodson, Murray Edlis and Lieut. Harry Mellon. We can't decipher the writer's signature, but we do read that he offers to balance a paper cone on his nose not for 30 minutes (as the Aliquippa acrobat promised) but four times 30 minutes, which, you can see for yourself, is 120 minutes. After that feat our hero says he'll catch backwards a ball dropped from the roof of the Koppers Building. The unemployment situation is terrible.

According to Clarence (Pete) Peters, who is probably the strappingest (business of coining a word) chief electrician in town, a Negro window cleaner was standing precariously on a window ledge of a downtown building gazing up at Betty, the recent flagpole sitter.

A gentleman who writes a very small hand and signs himself Charles W. King, of Crafton, says that on January 1 he'll be sitting on a cold bench in Battery Park waiting for a boat for Australia. Mr. King is pretty well tired of convention people and the trend of things today and he's determined to "live" rather than amass a fortune and fear old age and the poorhouse. He wrote in primarily to tell how he enjoyed Jimmy McKay's story of Jim Mulvihill's goat, and he sees Mr. McKay as one of the rapidly vanishing race of real folks who grab life by the tail and shake h— out of it. Mr. King complimented us sincerely, but that was only one of two compliments we received today. The other is from a letter writer whose name we printed recently. We'll quote him, in, of course, part, and verbatim: "I have just come to the conclusion, the reason the sidewalks of Pittsburgh are best in the country and known from coast to coast is because, like all good, strong foundations of any building, William Pfarr is underneath or in back of it all." Alright. But we'll never be satisfied until we're read in Japan.

Will Rogers Says:

SONORA, Cal., Sept. 16.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Just bumming along up through this historical gold-mining country. Just passed through Angels camp, the home of Mark Twain's jumping frog. Twain and Bret Harte both prowling around in those old hills, no wonder these Broadway story writers can't think of things like those two did. Visited Jackson, the livest town of the whole range. Two big gold mines running. Mining is coming back, we need the gold. I don't know how Sir Thomas is making out with his tug boat today, but if wishes was wind she would win in a gale. Yours,

WILL.

PEDESTRIANS VICTIMS OF BANDITS

Thugs in Auto Cruise East Liberty and Squirrel Hill Streets, Holding up 5 Men

Police today were searching for a bandit trio following five holdups in the Squirrel Hill, East End and Morningside districts last night and early today.

W. J. Easton, of 1445 Wightman street, the first victim, told police that as he was nearing his home a machine pulled up. Two armed men, who jumped to the street, took his watch and $9. A third man remained at the wheel of the machine, Easton said.

Fifteen minutes later, police said, the same trio held up James Dunn, of 1635 Beechwood boulevard, near his home, and took his watch and 60 cents.

Charles Trady, of 10 West Erie street, started to run when the men accosted him at South Negley and Howe street, he told police, and they made no effort to catch him.

From South Negley avenue, police said the trio went to Holyoke and Drumm streets, where they robbed George McElroy, of 609 Ridge avenue, of $3.

The fifth holdup occurred in Chislett street when the men took a watch from George Orgill, of 1237 Morningside avenue. Police said they were convinced that the same three men were responsible for all five holdups.

TRAFFIC CODE SOUGHT AGAIN

Another effort, led by Frank L. Duggan, of the Better Traffic Committee, is being made to codify Pittsburgh's maze of traffic laws and regulations.

The proposed "Hoover model" traffic code has been introduced into Council for the fourth time. It has been changed to bring it in line with the final recommendations of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Duggan said the code represented more than two years' work on the part of the committee, especially of the legislative section headed by Fred D. Schatz. Most of the present ordinances, he added, are out of date. Many of them are survivors of the city's first traffic code of 1905 and at least two go back as far as 1816. Fifty thousand voters, Duggan asserted, have urged its passage.

Engineers to Hold Monthly Session

Members of the Pittsburgh section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the electrical section of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, will meet tonight under the auspices of the West Penn Electrical Company.

It is the first regular meeting of the year, and will become a monthly affair. About 300 engineers of the district are expected to attend.

Fall Proves Fatal To Braddock Man

Suffering a fractured skull when he fell down stairs in his home last Friday, John Zicak, 58, of 23 Weed street, Braddock, died in the Braddock General Hospital last night, according to the morgue report.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH REED

COUPLE IN TREE BRAVE RAIN

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reed, the man-and-wife tree sitters of Gibbon street, today completed 24 hours of perching in the hard, bare limbs of a tree in the rear of their home. They were both tired, bedraggled and rain-soaked after the showers of last night, but were still determined to stay up for at least 48 hours. Mrs. Reed said:

"We got a tough break in the weather. All the curl is out of my hair, and I feel more like a drowned rat than a human being. We'll stick it out for another day and night, though, and maybe longer. It depends on how we feel tomorrow."

Reed's brother, Martin, a former marathon dancer, has helped train the sitters, and, with their ground manager, William Carr, is caring for their needs.

Cathie Proves Successful Hostess at Party

CHAPTER XX.

"A delightful evening," old Mrs. Vaughan said graciously, slipping into a black and green Mandarin coat, an old yellow-tinged seal coat, and a maroon knitted shawl, as she prepared to leave.

She meant it. Cathie knew that. Knew that her dinner party had been a success, and that everyone, but herself, had a good time.

Certainly Mrs. Willoughby had enjoyed it. She had chased Gordon Moore into a corner and kept him there for two hours, chatting and laughing with him about things that everybody but Cathie knew.

"My dear, do you remember that house party at Eagle Rock, the year we were all interested in that McShane project? Can you ever forget it!"

"And Adele's sprained ankle!"

"Adele always sprains her ankle on mountain peaks, four miles from the nearest packhorse!" Gordon Moore teased, and Mrs. Willoughby, laughing and blushing, cried, "You didn't seem to mind being the packhorse!"

Uninterested

Everybody but Cathie Has Good Time

Alfred Farnsworth's rare laugh rang out, "Mind! It was the event of the year for him, Adela!"

Cathie listened, smiling, outwardly interested and happy, inwardly bored and miserable. What did she care for Adela Willoughby's sprained ankles, and the McShane project? What did she care for anything, except making good at her job, making her husband's guests think she was a successful hostess?

"Well, they seemed to enjoy themselves," she thought, when Mrs. Willoughby, wrapped in mink had gone to her waiting motor, and the Vaughans, bundled and befurred, had been pushed and prodded and hoisted into theirs.

The thought cheered her and she was able to give her hand lightly to Moore, and to bid him an almost gay good-night.

"Good-night," he said, smilingly, "and thanks for taking me in like this. You must have a great deal of company. I'll try not be in the way."

"No, we don't have much company," she told him, and withdrew the hand he was holding.

"The devil you don't! Then what do you do, just the two of you in a place like this?"

"Nothing."

Puzzled

Gordon Suspects Something Is Wrong

He was a little abashed. "Sorry I live up in the sticks so much I'm not fit for decent society. Forgottem the few manners I ever had."

It was Cathie's turn to be confused. "It's quite all right. I wasn't being sarcastic. We—we really don't do anything—much."

He followed her to the stairway. "Look here! It's none of my business, but is anything wrong? If there's anything I can do . . . forgive me for speaking it, but I couldn't help noticing, I'm sure there's something"

She tried to laugh it off. "You know you were to busy looking at that pretty Mrs. Willoughby to see me at all. Besides, . . . do I look unhappy?" And she smiled, that gorgeous, dazzling smile of hers. Flash of even white teeth, trembling dimple, blue eyes almost disappearing in her radiant, laughing face.

"You look very beautiful."

"And happy. Don't I look happy?"

"Yes—happy."

"So you see—" she broke off, laughing.

"Yes, I see," he said soberly. "Well—good night!"

She should have stopped there. She knew she should. But she couldn't help asking. "Do I look just the same. Would you have known me? Have I . . . . . have I changed?"

He looked at her, long and thoughtfully. "Yes, you've

Jilted by Phone, Declares Girl Suing Pittsburgher

Joseph Gaal, of 432 Atwood street, failed to appear at the wedding ceremony and later telephoned that he would not marry her, Lena Herskovitz, 904 Intervall avenue, New York City, charged in her breach of promise suit, seeking to recover $50,000 damages, filed in Common Pleas Court.

Gaal called upon her in New York February 8 last, proposed and was accepted, the wedding was fixed for the next day and a rabbi was engaged, according to the suit.

Notwithstanding his promises, Gaal did not appear, and February 10 he telephoned his intention not to marry her, Miss Herskovitz averred. She declared she spent murch money preparing for her marriage and her peace of mind has suffered through her disappointment, and she has been ridiculed, harassed and humiliated. On the plea of her attorney, Armin Friedman, a capias was granted on Gaal by Judge Frank P. Patterson, who fixed $500 bail.

GARBER HURT WHEN AUTOS COLLIDE

Orchestra Leader Escapes With Bruises but Manager, Zubor, Fares Much Worse

Jan Garber, orchestra leader playing here, and his business manager, Robert Zubor was hurt when their auto skidded on the Babcock boulevard and collided with another machine, police said, Garber had minor bruises, but Zubor's condition was regarded as serious.

Mrs. Ronald Bowser, of 412 Swissvale avenue, Wilkinsburg, and Mrs. Ruth Shook, of 7625½ Frankstown avenue, were hurt when an auto driven by Mrs. Shook's husband, Edward, collided with two other cars, operated by John Gurchak, 40, of 112 Linnview street, and Walter Zangel, 24, of 633 Margaretta street, in South Eighteenth street.

Police said they were unable to determine how the accident occurred. Both women were taken to the South Side Hospital where their conditions were said to be good. All three drivers were arrested.

John Probatec, 8, of 330 McKean street, is in the South Side Hospital with a broken leg, received, police said, when he was struck by an auto operated by Harry Ausderheide, 26, of 209 East Meyers avenue.

Robert G. Morehead, 14, of 4517 Torely street; Benny LeDoine, 16, of 4619 Torely street, and Herbert Shubert, 15, of 4 Canoe way, were seriously hurt when they fell from a truck which was crossing the Bloomfield Bridge.

George Evans, of 4010 Howe street, and Norman Regelman, of 4012 Melwood street, who were with the other three boys, told police the end gate of the truck came open when they jumped on. They both escaped injury.

FLAWS IN VOTE COUNT SHOWN

Substantial discrepancies in the count of votes by the election board of the Twentieth District of the Sixth Ward at the May primary were shown by the report of the special recount board filed in Common Pleas Court.

Variations listed were: For governor, Brown 166, recount 153; Pinchot 11, recount 21; for senator, Davis 169, recount 159. The recount board segregated 15 ballots because of erasures and mutilations.

DeMolay Alumni To Hold Smoker

The fall program of the Pittsburgh Chapter, DeMolay Alumni, will open Friday night with a smoker meeting in St. Peter's Parish House, Craft avenue. Rees Price, Jr., vice-president, will conduct the meeting and have charge of the entertainment program.

Arthur McGrew has been announced as chairman of the committee planning a Rube Party to be held later in the month.

W. C. T. U. to Hold Bellevue Meeting

The Bellevue unit of the W. C. T. U. will hold its September meeting tomorrow afternoon in the Bellevue Methodist Protestant Church. A gold medal speaking contest will be held in the same church tomorrow night, when five speakers, representing as many churches, will compete.

Jail Warden Keeps Clerk, Blocks Workhouse Term

The county jail is assured of a record clerk for another year.

Warden John McNeil, when it appeared that his clerk was to be taken from him and confined in the workhouse, went before Presiding Judge George V. Moore and asked if the man could not be held in the jail. Judge Moore complied.

Julian S. Thomas, formerly of Bellefonte street, is the prisoner in question. He was sentenced to a nine-month jail term by Judge Thomas J. Ford last spring, in a false pretense case involving a land scheme.

Thomas yesterday pleaded guilty to passing seven bad checks on downtown merchants, totaling $250. He was sentenced to make restitution and undergo a term of one year in jail, beginning at the expiration of the nine-month term, which still has several months to run. Judge Moore remarked that the new sentence would have been to the workhouse had it not been for Warden McNeil's request.

BENJAMIN F. NOWAK

CITY LIFEGUARD RESCUES 8

Eight rescues have been credited to Benjamin F. Nowak, city lifeguard, of 902 Canal street, who will complete his busiest season today with the closing of the river swimming pools.

Stationed at Beach No. 1 on the Monongahela River near the Tenth street bridge, he has pulled eight helpless swimmers from the river since Decoration Day, and has assisted in the resuscitation of two men who sought to end their lives by drowning.

Beach No. 1 is considered the most difficult station in the city. Forty boats passing through the locks, near the pool, cause an undertow that snares bathers. Rescues this year have brought Nowak's total up to 30.

At the age of 14, after pulling a companion from the Allegheny River, the Carnegie Hero Fund recommended a scholarship for him at Carnegie Tech. He refused the scholarship, however.

2 HELD IN RAID, STILL SEIZED

A 250-gallon still was found in operation when prohibition agents yesterday raided the home of James Magnone, 34, of 14 Mt. Oliver street, according to their report. Jack Feldman, of 5212 Coral street, who was there at the time, was also arrested, it was said.

Besides the still, the agents reported confiscating two coils and condensers, 33 100-gallon vats and 1,600 pounds of corn sugar. They destroyed 12 barrels of mash, they said. Feldman was released on a $1,000 bail bond, and Magnone was committed to the county jail.

EUCHARISTIC DAY FETE SET FOR OCT. 12

Service to Be Largest Religious Gathering Ever Held in This District

Plans for the largest religious service ever conducted in the Pittsburgh district were being formulated today, with arrangements being made for 50,000 laymen to participate in Eucharistic Day at Forbes Field October 12.

While the observance will be conducted under auspices of the Diocesan Union of the Holy Name Society of the Roman Catholic Church, non-members and non-Catholics are being invited to attend the huge religious service for men only.

EXTENDS BEYOND DIOCESE

The services are expected not alone to draw men from the 10 Western Pennsylvania counties composing the Pittsburgh diocese but from throughout the tri-state district.

The services will be held beginning at 7 p. m. A special altar, a replica of the altar used at the International Eucharistic Congress in Chicago, will be constructed, while a special tabernacle will be built for the Blessed Sacrament.

With 400 to 500 priests from the diocese participating, the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the diocese of Pittsburgh, will pronounce the benediction as the 50,000 or more men in the stands will kneel in prayer, each with a lighted candle.

1,000 CHOIR BOYS

More than 1,000 choir and altar boys will serve and a special choir of 300 members will be trained by Father Carlo Rossini, music director of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Many visiting prelates from throughout the adjoining diocese will be present. Special trains will be run by all railroads to carry the worshipers here, while Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh is arranging special traffic rules for the night in the Oakland district.

HEALTH FRAUD TRIAL DUE

Alleged to have capitalized on the recent order of the city Health Department, which demands that all restaurant employes undergo examinations, John Staley, 36, of the Nixon Hotel, was held for investigation in Oakland Police Court today.

Inspector James Hoey, of the Oakland district, said that his investigation disclosed the fact that Staley promised restaurant employes "health certificates" for $1, issued by the American Health Clinic, Inc., in the Keenan Building.

Hoey said that when he visited the clinic headquarters he found a constables' sale sign on the door, and the rooms of the office deserted.

Miss Alice Kern, 202 Johnston avenue, waitress in Garvin's restaurant, 201 Smithfield street, and George Smith, night chef, of 3623 Penn avenue, testified at the hearing today they had paid $1 each for certificates.

Dr. Alfred Durham, osteopathic physician, 302 Buhl Building, Fifth avenue and Market street, testified he made the examinations as a favor to Staley, but said he received no money.

Staley maintained his proposition was legitimate.

Stetson Shoe Folk Hold Sunday Picnic

The picnic of the Stetson Shoe Boosters was held last Sunday at Turner's Grove. Many of the members were met in the store, 203 Sixth street, by R. Bruce Murphy, manager, and were taken to the grove. The outing was featured by an athletic program.

Thugs Attack, Rob Road Storekeeper

Salvadore Jeffery, 22, was beaten by thugs early today as he closed his confectionery on the Creek road near Dorseyville, and was robbed of $28, his day's receipts, according to a report to county detectives.

Jeffery said he did not see his assailants.

PINCHOT HELPS TO DEDICATE TOWN HALL

Gloria Soon to Reveal Requirements for Parisian Tour

TRIP TO PARIS DETAILS SOON TO BE KNOWN

Film Star Promises Entries To Have Announcement This Week; Send in Blanks

In a day or two the suspense will be over. In a day or two Gloria Swanson, through the Sun-Telegraph, will tell the hundreds of anxious girls in Pittsburgh and vicinity just what they will have to do to be the fortunate girl of all girls by being awarded the de luxe trip to Paris—all expenses paid.

At the same time they will be told what to do to win one of the five trips to Bermuda that the Sun-Telegraph is giving away for the purpose of amplifying Miss Swanson's generous offer.

TOUR RARE TREAT

The tour to Paris will be something never to be forgotten—something often dreamed about with but little chance for it to come true. Miss Swanson, however, has made it possible, and she will spare no expense and overlook no detail that will make this visit to Paris the real event of a lifetime.

Luxury will be the keynote. The girl who gets the award will have the finest accommodation on the French liner Paris, which is filmed a great deal in Miss Swanson's newest picture, "What a Widow!" In the meantime this lucky girl will have been entertained for a day or two in New York, visiting the motion picture studios and meeting many leading stars.

Arriving in Paris, it will be just a case of "go" for a solid week, and everything worth while will be seen, with the assistance of efficient guides, that possibly could be seen in seven days. Miss Swanson hopes to be with the girl in Paris. Returning, the women will sail on the palatial Ile de France.

The five Bermuda tours, while of not such great magnitude or distance, have a charming lure—

G. O. P. NOMINEE MT. LEBANON SPEAKER

Sees Public Interest as Clean Government Key; $240,000 Building Open

Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, left here today to continue his campaign speaking tour in central and eastern sections of the state. He was expected to reach his home at Milford Saturday for a rest over the week-end.

Pinchot, the principal speaker last night at the dedication of Mt. Lebanon Township's $240,000 Town Hall, said he was intensely interested in the city-manager plan as adopted by Mt. Lebanon, and believed that form of municipal government was a prime factor in the township's progress.

He said the new town hall was proof of what could be done when citizens worked together in harmony.

Pinchot declared government was good or bad in proportion to the number of people that took an interest in the conduct of public business. The greater the interest, the better the government, he averred.

President of Council John S. Herron congratulated the people of Mt. Lebanon on their beautiful building, and said it might suggest ideas of the proposed county town hall to County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who, Herron said, had been admiring the structure from the speakers' stand.

SAYS WAITING IS BEST

Armstrong said:

"Every fellow with a lot or a dump half the size of your new building has tried to force the county commissioners to buy it as a site for the $6,000,000 county town hall.

"The commissioners were not elected by those people trying to sell their property. When the commissioners decide upon a site for the town hall, the people that did elect them will say it was the right location."

AT JEANNETTE

Pinchot spoke yesterday at the industrial and commercial exposition at Jeannette, Pa.

He addressed about 100 Methodist Episcopal clergymen at a noon meeting yesterday in the Methodist Publication Building, Fifth and Penn avenues.

More than 800 persons, a large percentage of them women, greeted Pinchot at public receptions yesterday in his Hotel William Penn suite. Visitors included County Commissioners Armstrong and Edward V. Babcock; Mayor Kline, Herron, City Controller James P. Kerr, and other elected officials of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County; chairmen and vice chairmen of Pittsburgh wards, and members of the city and county Republican committees.

Pinchot also delivered two radio broadcasts yesterday over KDKA.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Question Box" each day will ask a question of Public Interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Thou shalt not covet riches.
Thou shalt not fear to die.
Thou shalt not advertise thyself for vain glory.
Thou shalt not be proud.
Thou shalt not be lazy.
Thou shalt not commit adultery nor gamble.
Thou shalt not smoke.
Thou shalt not drink wine.
Thou shalt not borrow money.
Thou shalt not lie.

JOSEPH CROYLE, Schenley Heights, graduate of Schenley High School—I would not like to be a Chinaman if I had to go by these rules. They do have their good points, though, and I am convinced that if a person kept to these commandments he would lead a good life.

Joseph Croyle.

MISS JANE CROYLE, Schenley Heights, student, Carnegie Tech—The Chinese commandments do not mention God nor Sunday. They seem more like social commandments. However, I believe that they would serve their purpose.

Miss Croyle.

G. E. O'DONNELL, Mt. Lebanon, clerk—On the whole, these commandments seem to deal more with social standards than those of Moses. I think "Thou shalt not smoke" could be eliminated. They are a good standard for social life.

G. E. O'Donnell.

HULDA BRIERLY, Schenley Heights, Carnegie Tech—These commandments are modern enough, but lack the idea of God that we find in the original Ten Commandments. All of them would be good to keep all of the time, with the exception, perhaps, of borrowing money once in a while.

Miss Brierly.

MRS. L. DRISCOLL, Dormont, business woman—I don't think these commandments are any improvement on the Ten Commandments. A few of the Chinese commandments could be eliminated and a few better rules could be substituted in their place. Notwithstanding my above criticism, I believe this would be a good code of conduct.

Mrs. Driscoll.

LUCKY GIRL

changed," he said at last. "I thought at first that you hadn't, but you have. It's surprising. You were just a little kid last April.....why, when I said that about your marrying a millionaire some day I said it as I'd say it to a baby—all in the future, you know. I.....I couldn't believe it when I heard you had married Alfred Farnsworth."

"I didn't think you would even remember me," she said, very low.

"Remember you? Girl, I was waiting for you to grow up. And then I was going to come back to the city and marry you myself!" He laughed when he said it, in a loud, bantering tone.

"He's telling the truth, thinking I won't believe him," something inside Cathie's mind seemed to say.

And, tonelessly, still smiling, she answered, "You waited too long, didn't you?"

They both laughed then. Some of the old naturalness came back. Moore held out his hand again. "Well, good night, Catherine. I mustn't keep you, talking nonsense all night!"

"Good night, Gordon."

If he was going to call her by her first name, she might as well call him by his!

She almost flew up the stairs, her feet were so light, and not even the glimpse of a blue chambray skirt whisking up just ahead of her dampened her spirits. What if Marguerite had listened in on them? What was the difference? Why worry? Why take life so hard?

Mr. Farnsworth was delighted. "That's the girl. Full of high spirits!" he told her, pinching her pink cheek. He had been worried about Cathie, afraid she was not happy, for she had been so lifeless, and seemed to have so few friends. But since Moore came, and they struck up such a friendship, everything was different. "We must have more company. She needs it," he decided, and sighed a little, thinking of having to struggle into a tuxedo, and sit up after 10 instead of being able to go comfortably to bed.

Cathie was delighted, too, though having company meant having to invite Chester and Enid, and that Mrs. Willoughby whom she had taken such a dislike to. Compared to the highly colored widow being vivacious and monopolizing all the presentable men, the languid Enid was almost likable.

Besides, Christmas was in the air. "Shop early," advised the newspapers. "Shop here!" invited the department store windows, brave with synthetic holly and cotton snow. And Cathie, for once in her life, could shop!

Her Christmas list was so long it took seven pages of her hand-tooled Morocco note book. She spent blissful hours sitting on the floor in her room tying up packages, weighing the merits of red ribbon and white tissue with Santa Claus seals, and gold paper with green cord and black and white reindeer stickers, more arty, but not quite so Christmassy. . . .

It was wonderful to be so busy! She planned a huge Christmas dinner. Cheong would think of delicious things to have to eat, and she could decorate with real mistletoe, and silvery madrone branches, and lots of very fine, shimmery tinsel, and have joke presents! The toy dog she got for Gordon Moore was so funny she had to show it to her husband in advance. "Look, Alfred. It wags its tail . . . see? Isn't it a darling? And do you think I ought to get him a real present, too? He wouldn't think it queer of me? I was just thinking . . . he'll be away from his family and all. Don't you think we ought to?"

Alfred Farnsworth looked up over his glasses. "But Gordon won't be here," he said. "I've finished my work with him. Didn't I tell you?"

U. S. HOLDS FOUR FOR FAKE BILLS

William A. Landvoigt, chief of United States secret service operatives in the Pittsburgh district, was advised of the arrest in New York of John Dispossitti, an Italian, as being one of a quartet of passers of counterfeit $20 Federal Reserve Bank notes in Cambria and Somerset counties on Labor Day and the Sunday preceding.

Three other suspects are under arrest. During the two days 40 of the spurious notes were passed at gasoline stations and other stores and the roundup of the four men resulted from investigations conducted under Chief Landvoigt.

Start Air Service To Indiana, Pa., Tomorrow

Plane service between Indiana, Pa., and Pittsburgh, for the price of train fare plus Pullman rates, will start tomorrow, according to R. Brenning Hamilton, manager of Indiana Airways, Inc.

The first plane will leave Indiana at 9 a. m., arriving at Bettis Airport by 9:30. Two trips daily are planned.

The fliers will be met at the airport by a motor coach, which will convey them downtown.

Missing Natrona Boy, 16, Hunted

Police are searching for Paul Kirkland, 16, of 46 Wood street, Natrona, who disappeared from his home last Wednesday night. He is described as having dark hair and eyes, being 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighing 145 pounds. At the time of his disappearance he was wearing a cap, blue work trousers and black oxford shoes. Anyone knowing of his whereabouts is asked to communicate with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kirkland.

G. O. P. TO HOLD 3 BIG RALLIES

HARRISBURG, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Republican campaign in Pennsylvania will include three general meetings in different sections of the state, at which all the candidates will appear, it was announced today by State Chairman Edward Martin.

Although no dates have been set, it is likely the first of these general meetings will be held in Harrisburg, Martin said. He explained that the other two would be in the western and eastern sections, probably at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, although there is a possibility one will be held in the anthracite region.

Mother, 3 Children Flee $300 Blaze

Mrs. Mary Smith, of 2515 Sarah street, South Side, was forced to flee with her three children shortly before daybreak today when the roof of her one-story frame home caught fire.

Firemen said they were unable to determine the cause. The flames did damage estimated at $300.

Songs of Joy Cost Street Singer $5

Frank Turek, 17, of 1914 Fox street, was described by police as "the most troublesome boy on the South Side" this morning before Magistrate Thomas Jones in Morals Court. It was testified Terek was arrested last night while singing loudly in Carson street. Residents in that district have complained of the singing, police said.

In his defense Turek said he sang because he was happy, and Magistrate Jones fined him $5.

FORGET-ME-NOT DAY SEPT. 27

The twelfth anniversary of the opening of the Argonne drive in the World War, Saturday September 27, has been selected by President Hoover as the annual Forget-Me-Not Day of the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

Gold Star Mothers of the district will take leading parts in the sale of the flowers in the Pittsburgh streets that day.

The work will be undertaken by members of the Greater Pittsburgh and Aspinwall posts of the organization, each of whom will ask three women to take part. Nearly all of the Aspinwall mothers are in the Veterans' Hospital there.

Police on Trail Of 'Window Burglar'

Center avenue police today are seeking the burglar who drills small holes beneath the locks, then opens the windows with a small piece of wire.

He has been active in that district for about a week. Several days ago he came so close to being captured that he left his drill and wire behind as he saw the officers approaching.

Last night, after drilling a window in the home of E. J. Polland at 502 Junilla street, he again was frightened away when a member of the family went to investigate the noise, police said.

WITNESS TELLS OF LALI KILLING

A first degree verdict is being sought by the state in the murder trial of James Garden, 812 Miller avenue, Clairton. Garden, a grocer, is accused of having shot Samuel Lali, 35, of 702 Miller avenue, July 4, after Garden had ordered Lali and others to cease firing a toy cannon in the street in front of his house.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Kalson, in outlining his case to the jury, said he expected to prove a case of first degree, but did not say he would demand the death penalty.

Much of yesterday was spent in selection of the jury. Late in the day Joe Fortunato and Joe Vitelli, Clairton, testified they were members of a crowd of eight or nine men who had been loading a piece of pipe with powder and mud and firing it in the street about 4 a. m. They said Garden called to them to go away, and said they and others started to leave when he fired twice from an upper window. Others present at the time are expected to testify today.

It is said Garden's defense will be accidental shooting, he claiming that his automatic revolver was discharged accidentally while he was raising the window. He is being defended by Attorney William H. Coleman. The case is being tried before Visiting Judge James M. Barnett, of Perry County.

PACIFIC FLIERS TELL OF FOG

OMINATO, Aomori Prefecture, Japan, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The fear they may not be able to attempt another non-stop airplane crossing of the Pacific Ocean from Japan to Tacoma, Wash., was expressed today by Harold Bromley and Harold Gatty.

Bromley said lack of finances may compel him to abandon the flight.

Gatty revealed it was a damaged exhaust pipe and not a leaky gasoline feed line which caused the return of their monoplane City of Tacoma to Japan after a flight of almost 25 hours, during which the plane traveled 1,200 miles towards its goal.

"The exhaust started leaking soon after we took off from Samishiro Beach," said Gatty, "and suddenly exploded when we reached the northern extremity of the Kurile Island chain northeast of Japan. The plane was filled with noxious gases. Respiration was difficult and we realized we would be unable to continue for long."

Mothers to Be Guests Of Church Children

Children of the cradle roll, beginners and primary departments of the Ingram Presbyterian Church, Prospect avenue and Mackin street, will hold a party Friday afternoon, September 26, in the church rooms, at which their mothers will be guests.

A mothers' meeting, at which Mrs. Ralph Johnston, president of the Congress of Clubs, will speak, will be held, and all mothers have been invited.

Furniture Dealers Plan Style Show

Plans will be made at a dinner tonight in the Chamber of Commerce Building auditorium for the national home furnishing style show, to be held September 26 to October 4, here.

L. J. Brown, of Chicago, will be the speaker, and others prominent in the furniture industry, will aid with arrangements. Joseph Gilbert, of Gilbert's Furniture Store, will be the chairman of the show.

RETRIAL DENIED SURETY FIRM

Federal Judge R. M. Gibson in an opinion denied the motion of the American Surety Company of New York for a new trial in the suit of the Greek Catholic Union, of Munhall, a beneficial society, which was awarded a verdict of $46,800 against the New York company, and George Kondor, at the May term of Federal Court.

It was an action to recover interest on $200,000 which had been transferred to the United States Trust Company, of Johnstown, from the Peoples State Bank of Johnstown, when the latter institution became financially involved in 1924. Under an agreement the trust company took over the affairs of the Peoples State Bank on condition it would not be liable for interest on the Catholic Union funds for four years.

Kondor, who was president and the largest stockholder of the defunct bank, was under $100,000 bond, given by the American Surety Company, as treasurer of the Catholic Union, and was named defendant with the surety company in the suit to recover interest on the money lost through the transfer of the union's funds.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Horse Show to Be Held Friday, Saturday by Westmoreland Hunt

Now that the first of the autumnal horse shows is over, that of the Pittsburgh Hunt on Friday and Saturday, everyone in the social world is now anticipating the Westmoreland Hunt's ninth show to be an event of Friday and Saturday of this week. And the scene of the two-day event will be, as usual, the polo grounds at Greensburg.

On Sunday I told you about some of the folks who had reserved either boxes or parking space near the ring for the show. And today I want to tell you about some more men and women prominent in Pittsburgh and Sewickley society and in Greensburg who've reserved places.

Richard King Mellon has taken a box, and so has R. T. Morrow. Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson, Mrs. Harrison Nesbit and Mrs. G. R. Nutty will be boxholders, too, as I mentioned on Sunday.

Charles I. Flaccus, Jr., has reserved parking space, and so has Mrs. Simon J. Patterson, Richard King Mellon, H. F. Stark, Mrs. Richard Coulter, Jr., Mrs. Gerard S. Bryce, Mrs. Edward J. McCague, Mrs. C. I. Shannon, Mrs. C. V. Witt, Dr. W. W. Lermann, William Christopher Robinson, Mrs. A. C. Martin, Mrs. G. R. McNary, George Krebs, William A. Coulter, Henry W. Coulter, William J. Jack and George L. McCook.

Others who've taken parking space are George Calvert, Joseph A. Kelly, J. W. Lawrence, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, Herbert A. May, H. N. Van Voorhis, Mrs. James Francis Burke, Theodore Smith, H. F. Bovard, Dr. Edward Stieren, John Hoffstot, Joseph D. Wentling, P. M. Nutty, W. Eugene Gary, Mrs. Oliver M. Kaufmann, J. M. Cook, Elmer Turner, Miss Katherine Walker, Harry D. Wherrett, Robert S. Waters, Russell Love, Edwin Love, A. S. Humphreys and James Neale.

The A. C. Martins of Greensburg, will entertain with a tea at their home, "Wood Crest," Friday afternoon at the close of the show, and on Saturday afternoon the Harry F. Bovards will give a tea. On Sunday I told you about the luncheon the show committee would give for exhibitors on Saturday on the show grounds.

Ever so many members of the school set are now leaving town for the East to start another school year. Rebecca Frances Love, daughter of the Frank S. Loves of Bartlett street, Squirrel Hill, will leave tonight for New York. And from Gotham she'll go to the Westover School at Middlebury, Conn. This summer Rebecca spent at Camp Merrie-Woode, Sapphire, N. C.

Back to School

Laura Oliver, daughter of the George S. Olivers of Ellsworth avenue, is leaving for Westover tonight, too, I've heard, and Mary Edwards, daughter of the George F. Edwards, will also leave tonight for Westover.

Mary Louise Ellis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Ellis, of North Negley avenue, is returning to Connecticut College in New London.

The warm autumnal weather is postponing the return of some folks until early October. Among those still tarrying at their summer homes are Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards, Jr., who are summering as usual at East Hampton. They entertained 14 guests at the dinner dance at the Devon Yacht Club Saturday evening.

The Harry G. Samsons, of Morewood Gardens, have returned from three months in the British Isles, France, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Norway and Sweden.

Yesterday morning in the First Evangelical Church of Ligonier, Miss Helen Vainer, of Johnstown, became the bride of James Johnston, formerly of Wilkinsburg, now of Johnstown, with the Rev. James Hammer, pastor, and brother-in-law of the bride, officiating.

The bride wore a blue traveling suit and carried Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley. She is a graduate of the Conemaugh Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, and is the manager of the Sunnehanna Country Club in Johnstown. After the ceremony, breakfast was served in Ye Olde Inn in Jennerstown. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left for a Southern trip and after October 1 will be at home in Johnstown.

On Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Miss Edith May Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Holmes, of Aspinwall, became the bride of Aubrey C. Scott, son of Mrs. John Scott, also of Aspinwall.

Evening Wedding

The bride wore eggshell satin with a veil of tulle having a cap of rose point banded with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Dorothy Holmes, as her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, wore nile green satin and carried garden flowers. William Kanhoefer was the best man. The ceremony took place before an embankment of cibotium ferns and gladioli, with the Rev. Harold Kistler, of Steubenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. John Milholland, of Aspinwall, officiating. The bride's mother wore black lace and chiffon, and the mother of the bridegroom was gowned in beige lace, and both wore roses.

After a reception and dinner for 35 guests, Mr. and Mrs. Scott left for an eastern trip. They will make their home in Second street, Aspinwall.

Miss Minna Hirshfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hirshfield, of Bartlett street, will become the bride of Lewis Friedman, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Friedman, of London, England, this evening at 8 o'clock in the B'Nai Israel synagogue. There will be a reception in the home of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Friedman will leave for Los Angeles for their honeymoon. They will make their home in Weirton, W. Va.

Twentieth Century Club Remodeled, to Be Opened on Nov. 6

Thursday, November 6, has been set as the date for the opening of the Twentieth Century Club. It will be the president's reception and will afford the membership its first glimpse of the $500,000 changes and additions in the clubhouse.

On the following Monday the weekly lecture series will begin with Miss Marion H. Gheen, celebrated interior decorator, who "did" the clubhouse, the speaker. Next comes Lucile Douglas to speak on "Angkor," the old, seldom-visited Cambodian palaces, and, next, Dr. Roswell Johnson, of the University of Pittsburgh, who will discuss "Russia of Today."

Although the exact dates have not been set, thereafter at some time during the season will appear Oliver M. Sayler, playwright and critic, to speak on the drama; Dr. Bruno Roselli, Vassar professor of literature, whose subject "Whiter Womankind," sounds most promising; Ellery Walter, the young adventurer, who has tramped over the world on one leg (he has chosen the significant topic, "High Hats and Low Brows"); the famous Irish play poet, George Russell, who writes under the initials "A. E."; the Spanish writer, Salvador de Madariaga; and Dame Jane Rachel Growdy, with her long list of titles, Lady of Grace, Order of St. John of Jerusalem; Dame Commander of the British Empire, and chief of the social questions and opium traffic section, League of Nations.

For later in the season are scheduled Roy Chapman Andrews, famous Gobi Desert explorer, who will talk on "Hunting the Bones of Adams' grandfather;" S. K. Ratcliffe, distinguished English journalist and lecturer, who will speak concerning India; Sir Hubert Wilkins, the famous explorer; Harvey White Corbett, possessor of all sorts of medals and other honors, to talk on "The Meaning of Modernism in Architecture;" Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, and Louise Untermeyer, poet critic, essayist and anthologist.

Enclosed with the handsomely bound year book of the New Era Club is an invitation to a reception for the president, Mrs. A. J. Kelly, Jr., at the Congress of Clubs Wednesday, September 24. Next month, according to the new books, the club will have a talk by Miss Karen Fladoes, of Utility Hall, and a visit to the International Art Exhibit. The annual benefit card party is set for November 7. Walter H. Kelly will tell the women about "Life at Camp," and a program for the third gathering of the month will introduce the Rev. George Taylor, Jr., who will speak; Mrs. J. Charles Wilson, who will read, and Miss Elizabeth Webb, who will give piano solos.

New Era Club

The annual sewing day for the Dorothy Miller Christmas party and a social meeting with cards will be held in December. Mrs. H. C. Reller is to speak on Iceland at the first meeting of the New Year, and on January 28 the women will visit the Christian Home for Women, North Side. One of February's programs will be under the direction of Mrs. Jo Vogel, chairman of arts, and the other will be addressed by Prasulla Mukerji.

Accept Our Sincere Apologies!

Last week, through the daily press, we promised you something very grand. We promised you that every other week, at the Stanley Theatre, you would see movie actresses wearing French frocks. At the same time these frocks would be in our store.

The scheduled day came, and bitter disappointment. The clothes were here—the films, missing. Rapid investigation and Western Unions—tripping all over each other's heels. The films were found—reposing on the desk of the Board of Censors, and not to be released till this Thursday.

We apologize for this. And promise you may see these lovely pictures this Thursday for sure. Please come again to the Stanley to see them.

BOGGS & BUHL

TABS ARE A FEATURE OF NEW SARTORIAL DESIGN

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—We keep tabs on our frocks and so are sure that they are of the mode. And now we find tabs on suits and coats as well as frocks, for the tab is a form of trimming that blends well with almost any design, elaborate or tailored. The fabrics treatment of the is a very important in divers ways feature of the dressmaker type of frock that we are continually hearing so much about, for it permits ornamentation without elaboration, a point that cannot be too strenuously stressed.

THE TAILLEUR or tailored suit is much to the fore and nearly every smart woman is including one or more in her autumn wardrobe. These suits are superbly tailored with tabs and other touches to break the severity and create an individuality for what is after all a little-changing garment. For the tailored suit goes its way year after year sure of the allegiance of many women and making new friends amongst those who regard line as the prime achievement of a frock or suit.

THERE ARE BUT few women who will not be interested in the latest version of the tailleur as exemplified by the model from Chantal shown here. It is of brown and beige tweed and skirt has a petal line in front which is new as a detail for a suit. The interesting buttoned tabs which fasten the jacket are echoed in the tabs trimming the lower sleeves. A smart cravat of beaver forms the collar and is caught beneath the upper tab of the fastening.

* * *

THE WINDS OF AUTUMN do not seem to be able to tear chiffon from its high place in the fashion world. All the leading houses are showing evening frocks of chiffon and the one here is from Maggy Rouff. It is a fine example of the dinner dress, with its simply bloused bodice and a clinging straight skirt flounced low down with petal-like set-on pieces in two tiers. The straight shoulder bands are tied in small bow-knots at the top.

CLUB NOTES

the Penn Albert Hotel, Greensburg, November 4.

Mrs. Lane Thompson, a director of the Pittsburgh Drama League, is expected home today from Cincinnati, where she has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Tipton, for several weeks. Mrs. Thompson, who has been honor guest at numerous social affairs, was hostess at a most unique treasure hunt on Saturday. The guests found their clues, written in jingle, in various places throughout the city—a room in a fashionable hotel, a Negro cabin, a postcard studio where each car full of guests had to be photographed before the next clue was forthcoming, and other places. The hunt ended at the Tipton home, where supper was served and where the "treasure" proved to be chests of imported wafers covered with gold paper to represent "pieces of eight."

Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, chairman of community service in the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, will address a meeting of the Woman's Community Club of Zelienople tomorrow afternoon, speaking on "Mother's Responsibility in Traffic." Tomorrow evening Mrs. Miller will be honor guest at an informal dinner which Mrs. William Seaton is giving.

"Anniversary Day" with which the Woman's Historical Society always begins its year, is set for October 13 in the Congress clubhouse, and will be marked by a talk on "Family Life in Early Western Pennsylvania." Later topics, which will furnish further historical facts concerning this part of the state, are "Carnegie Library and Museum," "Soldiers' Memorial Hall," "Women of the Penn Family," "Historical Costumes," "Early Soldiery," "Oil Industry," "Pennsylvania in Verse and Song," "Rivers of Pennsylvania," "Old Canals," "Glass Manufacturing" and "Whisky Rebellion." In addition to its regular program meetings, the club will have its annual president's day, a playlet, a sale for the blind and its forestry day. At the closing meeting in May, achievements of the year will be summed up.

Studying History

Dorcas Chapter, No. 401, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its annual corn roast Wednesday at Riverview Park in charge of Mrs. Nell Brasecker.

Mrs. Ross K. Conaway, president of the South Hills College Club, will be honored with a reception at the home of Mrs. J. L. Herrman, Friday, September 26. The other officers will receive with Mrs. Conaway and a musical program will furnish the entertainment. The study groups will meet for organization this week. Mrs. Conaway heads the Tuesday afternoon group, Mrs. Carl Ruder, the Thursday afternoon group, and Miss Aimee Whitemore, the Monday evening group.

The Anne Egan Travel Club will have a dinner meeting tonight in the Congress of Clubs, and Miss Egan will tell of the European trip which she chaperoned this summer. Others of the party will also speak.

Next Tuesday the Travellers' will begin their fortieth year with the president's reception, honoring Mrs. C. H. Richards. Papers by the members, addresses by visitors, music and the usual special days, like drama day and the annual outing, comprise the year's interests for the members. Subjects, such as "Woman's Progress in Egypt," "Tombs of the Pharaohs," a history of the club, personal recollections of Spain, "Great Cities I Have Visited," "Industries of Henry Ford," "The Mountaineers of the South," "New Discoveries in Medicine," "Traveling in California," "American Antiques," "Seeing Florida," "The Passion Play," "Agriculture in the United States," "A Wedding in Egypt" and "My African Trip" give an idea of the variety of study outlined for the year.

Fortieth Year

A bridge luncheon will be held Saturday, September 20, at Kaufmann's, by the Pittsburgh Chapter, Maryland College Club. Mary Kathryn Morrow, of Bellevue, is chairman.

LOW PRICE OF CANE SUGAR STIMULATES HOME PRESERVING

Winter Food Bills Can Be Materially Reduced by Putting Up Fruit Now

One cannot go to market these days without being reminded that this is the year to make jellies, jams and preserves. Luscious fruit is in abundance and cheap everywhere, and pure cane sugar—the best to be had—is offered at an unheard-of low price.

The woman who puts up a dozen jars of fruit or a few glasses of jelly and jam will be surprised at how little they cost her. But the real saving will be noticed later when these delicious home-made preserves make it unnecessary to buy others.

As a means of making menus attractive, there are few foods more helpful than jellies, jams and preserves. For children, canned fruit is a most desirable breakfast dish or dessert.

Sweet pickles and relishes made of cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage or melon rind are also easy and inexpensive to put up. When served with meat and fish the combination is delicious. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

Reproductions Worn With Originals

Mannequins will wear American reproductions of these models at the same time as the originals. The copies are so identical with the originals that, but for their labels, they cannot be distinguished.

Reproductions May Be Ordered

Realizing that many smart women will want these individual and exclusive models for themselves, we have made it possible to secure exact reproductions at a fraction of their original cost. Models will be on display after the showing, and orders may be taken in the colors you prefer.

Styles Set the Coming Season's Mode

Come in and see what the smart set will wear here and abroad this fall and winter. See the silhouette re-interpreted. See the back-to-normal waistline. See the interesting new fabrics, the new colors, the smart accessories. See this thrilling romantic mode as Pittsburgh women will wear it, for these models show an extraordinary intuition of what the smart American accepts. Showings will take place on the Second Floor.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

Raquel Decides Against Marrying Eric

CHAPTER LIV

Love! Raquel restrained the curl that sought to creep into the corners of her scarlet lips.

"I tried to make the pater see it." The words were tumbling from Stafford now. He could not unleash the torrent of them fast enough. "He couldn't understand. He's outlived it—love. His own marriage was one of convenience. It's turned out right. He came to [illegible] my mother."

Stafford paused at a loose end. Raquel felt a movement. She was still watching the bee among the roses.

"I've told him I shall marry you, Raquel. I have me."

Now the bee lost its interest for Raquel. She turned warm, star-lit eyes to Stafford.

"There's this you must know, though, dear," he said, before you answer. We'll be pretty hard pressed for funds. The Stafford estate is entailed, you know. It's in the hands of the head of the house. The pater can cut me off entirely. Even to the small allowance I now get. He's threatened to do it. And I know he will keep his word.

The stars in the black eyes guttered as if caught in a tangle of wind-blown clouds.

Raquel Calm

"But Raquel I can go to work. Seriously, I mean. I've tried several things. None of them seemed to fit. Now I must fit myself to my work. There'll be something. We could take a small place, a cottage, somewhere outside Paris. It's hard to ask this sacrifice of you—you're so beautiful—so fragile—so—so—utterly desirable."

The black eyes widened. Teeth gleamed through scarlet lips drawn across their blue-whiteness.

"Perhaps if we should really marry—you're father might relent," said Raquel, evenly.

Stafford shook his head. No, he said. "We must not count on that. The Stafford motto is 'Stand Firm.' It's been a kind of religion with us. I have a younger brother, Edward. He'd come into the title and the estate. Ned's pretty much all right. He could carry on. Better than I. He's a thorough Stafford."

"Well," said Raquel, signaling the man in the black velvet coat who was busy at the far end of the garden, "that's that. And now, let's have a fresh cup of tea. This has grown cold."

"But Raquel," gasped Stafford, astonished at the calm with which this lovely woman received the coup de grace to what must have been high hope. "you haven't answered me. Do you love me enough to follow me? In's what will be for a while at least, a kind of oblivion? After this."

His eyes swept the garden, the brick house with its solarium. He was including all the luxuries, the swift, piquant pleasures for which these things stood.

"I must ask you to wait until I have considered," Raquel said. And added, when she saw the pain in his eyes, "You would not have me be hasty in so serious a matter. After all, the happiness of many persons, the entire course of their lives, are involved in the answer."

"Yes," he said, reluctantly.

Greta Inquisitive

"Here's the tea," she said gaily. "Two lumps, isn't it, and lemon?"

She was to meet Greta at the atelier of Alphonse. They were dining, with a party, in the Bois. She had expected Eric to be with them. Suddenly she wanted to be alone. She was about to plead a headache when Eric saved her the polite fiction. He had important business in town. He was going to [illegible] see a friend about taking a [illegible] a bank. He'd [illegible] [illegible] Raquel [illegible] [illegible] need [illegible] and I want to think.

He would have made the pater insist, had she not hastened to add: She sent word to Greta not to wait for her; she might be [illegible] late.

When Greta came in, after midnight, the lights were still burning in Raquel's room. Greta tapped on the door. Raquel bade her enter.

My word, old dear, Greta greeted, flinging herself onto a chaise lounge and flexing her weary muscles. "It was the fourth or the fourth—or what have you, Lady Stafford."

Raquel was toying with some trinkets on her writing-table. She did not answer.

For the love of [illegible] majesty," she cried, "don't tell me the title's gone bust."

No.

What's the trouble, then? Did you find out it was phony?

On the contrary, said Raquel, black eyes wide again, teeth gleaming, "it's very real."

Then, for heaven's sake, what's the matter? This place seems like a morgue.

How quick this mischievous Greta was.

A morgue. The burial place of dead hopes, dead ambitions.

I've decided it's not worth while, said Raquel. She was rearranging some flowers on the table.

Not worth while to grab a title?" gasped Greta. "But I thought it was position you craved—"

Decides Against Eric

Abruptly, without benefit of detail, Raquel told Greta what had happened. She spoke impersonally, as if the affair no longer concerned her.

"I can't give them up," she said at last. "This house, servants, fascinating clothes, going places, doing things. I'd grow sullen and ugly. Hidden away in some dusty corner. Waiting for him to come home, dusty and tired. To a dusty little house in a dusty little street. Dust! I've had enough of it. I tell you, I shook it off. I've been hard, cruel, contemptible. Because I could not endure the dust. It chokes me. It makes me want to—kill."

Greta was alarmed by the storm of passion this talk of dust aroused.

"Take it easy, dearie," she said soothingly. "Nobody's throwing any goofer dust around this place. I thought you'd come out of that tail-spin you went into over a title. It's the bunko, bubbleve, me."

"I'd have to give up everything. Even the clothes I wear. They belong to Alphonse. He'd find someone else to wear them. He'd make beauty as he made Mrs. Dexter, as he made me—and you, Greta."

"Thanks for the stewed apples," said Greta. "I'm not so hot on the beauty stuff, at that, but I have a way, dearie, I have a way."

"I'm leaving for Deauville early tomorrow morning," said Raquel, rising to a sudden decision. "Will you come along?"

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

The girl who presses out blackheads takes a chance of scarring her skin. If the digging must be done, she should purchase a comedone extractor, a piece of metal which has an opening the size of a pinhead that is placed over the blackhead. Pressure then is even and the delicate structure of the skin is not injured.

Green soap, sometimes recommended for shampooing the hair, is not green. It is the color and consistency of vaseline. In order to get it out of the hair after the soaping, it should be thinned with rubbing alcohol. It is used in treatment of dandruff and certain scalp disorders.

When using tincture of benzoin as an astringent to close enlarged pores, be sure to ask for the simple tincture, not the compound. After bathing the face with soap and water, fill the washbowl with cold water and add half a teaspoonful of benzoin. Use as a rinse.

Outdoor life is an insurance against gloomy thoughts and the rigidity of old age. Women who have been good walkers all their lives seldom get round-shouldered, or otherwise appear to carry the burden of the years. When young people realize that outdoor sports are more fun than dancing in smoke-filled night clubs, cosmetic sales will take a drop. Fresh air is nature's offering of rouge. It washes the lungs, speeds up digestive operations, enlivens the blood, puts a gal on her toes.

Household Hints

Mirrors should never be cleaned with soapsuds. The best method is to rub them with a paste of whiting and water. Polish with a dry chamois to remove the powder. A little ammonia in cold water will also give a brilliant polish to glassware.

Don't despair if the custard should cook just that little bit too long and curdle. Rub it through a very fine sieve and then beat well. It will mean a little less custard, but will probably be enough to answer your purpose and it will be smooth.

If you do not have the regular tins for cooking cookies, turn your layer cake tins upside down and bake on the bottoms. You will find the cookies will bake better, be less likely to burn and will be easier to handle than when baked right in the pans.

Fay King Thinks the Drawing-Room a Poor Training School for Stage

By FAY KING

With thousands of actresses out of work these days, it seems to me hardly the proper time for debutantes to be given parts in plays.

The prestige and publicity they bring is not the right kind for the public is more concerned with the unemployed whose place they are usurping.

Society has never contributed a great actress to the stage. With rigid training some few have managed to win a forced sort of success.

All the really great actresses have come from the humble byways of life.

The beauty and charm which shines in a drawingroom seems awkward and flat behind the footlights, just as the vivacity and sparkle which excels in the spotlight is often dulled in the drawing-room.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Wail of a Chorine

My Daughter, hear now the miserere of a Chorine which she chanteth with much sadness and weeping.

* * *

"Alas, alas!" waileth the Siren of Broadway. "Feed me with terrapin and stay me with joy-water! For I am full of sorrow and bitterness, and what do all my past glories avail me?"

For behold, what CHANCE hath an innocent unsophisticated Chorus Girl, become a worldly-wise debutante or a college flapper!

Behold, once women envied me, damsels trembled at thought of me, and men followed after me, and I was known in the land for my dangerous allurements and my conquests. My locks of spun gold were the glory of the White Way, and the delight of millionaires and butter-and-eggers.

* * *

My charms, my wisdom and my worldly sophistication were caviar to the callow youth and champagne to the elderly.

Men said of me, "Verily, SHE understandeth men. Yea, she is the Eternal Charmer, the spice of life and the diversion from boredom. And, beside her a simple maiden is tamer than a church festival beside a Paris night-club.

But, alas, it hath come to pass that the Flapper and the Co-ed and the Stenographer and the Debutante have beaten me at mine own game, and the Modern Damsel hath outstripped me in wisdom and daring.

"For, where I rouged, she painteth her face as with house paint; where my kisses were perfumed, her kisses are scented with lip rouge and spikenard and patchouli.

"Lo, she knoweth it all, and there is nothing concerning men and the love-game whereof she is not wise.

"She hath the youth of the 'chicken' and the knowledge of the Serpent, the slenderness of sixteen and the Experience of forty-six.

* * *

"She sitteth not back in the Debutante's Corner, but grabbeth the spotlight; she waiteth not to be sought by the WOOER, but rusheth out and 'flaggeth' him.

"She puffeth a cigaret with the sang-froid of a clubman; she displayeth her knees and is proud OF it.

"She speaketh an unknown tongue. She chatteth casually of psychoanalysis and sex. Her slang is fresher than new Spring vegetables and spicier than wine.

"She maketh me to look like a PRUDE!

"Go to! If a Chorus Girl is as champagne, the Flapper is of a 'Vintage.'

"Verily, verily, I shall sit at her feet, and learn of her wisdom.

* * *

"For I am but a Simple Thing beside her.

Finally, We Threw All the Superlatives Out of the Window

SIX advertisement writers tried to tell you about October Cosmopolitan. They failed—because each of them got so enthusiastic he used such expressions as "greatest magazine ever issued," "most beautiful publication in the world." All of this had been said before, not only about Cosmopolitan but about any number of other magazines. So finally we threw all the superlatives out of the window and decided to tell you the plain story of what's in the issue and why we think it may interest you.

IF YOU LIKE ROMANCE—

Fannie Hurst has written for you a novel of a Grand Passion, BACK STREETS . . . Adela Rogers St. Johns will play on your heartstrings in the love story of Emmy Lou and Tony Durango of the films, whom a million women loved . . . Royal Brown takes you into the life of that girl who had always been a bridesmaid and shows you what she did FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE . . . In Norman Anthony's story you wait for a bus and see what happens to THE MIND-THE-TAINT GIRL when Peter Crosby, Jr., comes along in his expensive car . . . Just a few samples, these.

IF YOU LIKE HUMOR—

Go to Hollywood with Anita Loos, who wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and read about that pure young man, Elmer Bliss, who leads you to THE BETTER THINGS OF LIFE . . . You will chuckle over the sad plight of the man who married a mermaid, in Lord Dunsany's THE MERMAID'S HUSBAND . . . And who could be more humorous than Joan Lowell, who wrote "The Cradle of the Deep," telling how she remodeled a 250-year-old house . . . And, of course, O. O. McIntyre gives you a good laugh in BE YOURSELF!

IF YOU ARE CURIOUS ABOUT THE EMOTION CALLED LOVE—

George A. Dorsey will tell you some things about mating you may never have heard before. If you are married, thinking of getting married, or avoiding getting married, here is something to read.

IF YOU LIKE THRILLS—

Let your blood tingle as you begin a real thriller—WHITE FACE—by Edgar Wallace . . . Irvin S. Cobb doesn't try to conceal from you the murderer, in his story, THE MASTERPIECE, although that murderer eluded the police for months. We thought there had been too many stories about racketeers until we read COME ACROSS by Peter B. Kyne . . . Rafael Sabatini takes you on a voyage with Captain Blood, in the days when pirates roamed the seas instead of city streets.

IF YOU LIKE POETRY—

We mean grand swinging verse that has gusto and drama—you are going to enjoy reading of the fate of that gallant ship, THE WANDERER, as told by John Masefield, the new poet laureate of England.

IF YOU LIKE PRIZE FIGHTS—

Then read what a man who thought nothing of fighting 60 rounds with bare knuckles has to say about the sissies who call themselves gladiators. His name is James J. Corbett and he declares YOU CAN'T MAKE FIGHTERS OF CRY-BABIES.

IF YOU LIKED—OR DISLIKED—WOODROW WILSON

Now you may read for the first time what happened during the Paris Peace Conference to turn him into a palsied, broken, old man—all revealed in letters from his Paris home by the White House Social Secretary, Edith Benham Helm.

No matter what your tastes in reading may be, we believe you'll find much to interest you in October Cosmopolitan's 24 features—and all for only 25 cents.

TELL IT TO SALLY

-:- By SALLY MARTIN

How Can Little Wallflower Make the Grade to Popularity?

Why can't Ruby win 'em?

Is she homely? Dumb? Self-conscious? No indeedy. She has cornflower blue eyes and hair of spun sunlight . . . she can talk sensibly on serious subjects . . . and she has all the poise in the world.

But all the boys of her own age seem to think she's a wash out and spend all their time concentrating on Jean, her cousin, a cute itty bitty sing who coos baby talk and has a snub nose and freckles.

"What's the matter with me?" Ruby wails. "Older men like me. But I'm not interested in them. I like boys my own age. Why can't I get them?"

Here's the rest of the broadcast.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"There are two young ladies I want to tell you about. Ruby and Jean. Ruby is me, and Jean is my cousin who is my constant pal. Outlining both of our characters, I shall start with Jean.

"She is exactly my age . . . 19 . . . five feet two, has bobbed curly hair, big brown eyes and a snub nose and freckles and a personality really identical with mine. We agree on about everything.

"Her clothes are not awfully attractive. She almost always says the wrong thing at the wrong time. Her talk is very babyish, and her actions are also. Yet she has boy friends galore. All the really nice fellows of 19 and 21 fall for her, even though she does not neck, drink or smoke.

"Now, in looks I am exactly opposite to her. I am a tall blonde, unbobbed, with blue eyes. And I do not use cosmetics because I really have a good complexion. I have had a college education and have been six months abroad. I do not work, but Jean does. For amusements I prefer tennis, golf and horseback riding to dances and auto rides. But that isn't saying I don't like dances too. I do.

"When I get with people I can talk on any subject unless it is trivial especially when Jean is with me. Aviation, economics, history, languages, politics, are subjects which interest me, and on whom I can talk. But when I do talk about them, it seems that Jean's friends consider it boring, and always change the subject. Why?

"I like these boys far, far better than I like older men, but they don't seem to like me a bit. I like boys who treat a girl like a pal, but I can't seem to get them.

"Older men always seek me out and seem to like me. And really, I'm not the least bit interested in them. I feel like I was out with a father or an uncle, and I'm only bored and uncomfortable. I want someone my own age. I want life with people of my own age. Why can't I get it? I want to go walking with a pal, and then drop in somewhere for a soda. I don't want limousines and fine clothes so much as I want a pal. Someone I can like. I don't want luxuries. Why do I get them instead of a pal?

"Older men rave about me. One artist painted a portrait of me from memory. I was also sketched for a magazine cover. But what does all that bring me? Not the love and happiness I long for, but just the blues. What's wrong with me, anyway? Can you figure it out?

Ruby."

Can I figure it out? That's easy, honey. Why do the boys consider you a flat tire? Because you are one! You've plenty of rim but no fizz. And you leave them cold.

Politics, languages, economics, history—they're great stuff, Ruby, in the right time and place. But their "time" isn't the shady side of a hammock on a moonlight night.

In short, these youngsters whose admiration you so greatly desire are not interested in your highbrow subjects, and, to tell the truth, neither are you.

Some one's hung plenty of education on you . . . and sold you the idea that it was of paramount importance. But beneath your imported blouse beats something that has education backed off the map—and that is the heart of youth.

Life at 19! Silly, sweet, clamorous life—crying out for fun and adventure and love—that urge in you, Ruby, will do more and the human race in general than all the education that ever was bound in sheepskin. That urge will build a home for you, and bring a husband to you, and put a baby in your arms. But it won't do these things if you sit primly on your shape and talk politics.

Limber up, kid! Talk as you feel! Be yourself—your merry, foolish, loving, eager self!

Stop scaring boys away with your false front. Let them see that you're young as they are. Let them think they're a hundred times wiser than you are. Take a tip from Jean. That little scallywag knows her stuff! Watch her. See how she makes the boys feel big and strong and smart. How she kids 'em and makes them feel they're indispensable.

Be smart enough to be silly—and life and love will come a-dancing and knock on your lonely little heart.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Facts About Peritonitis; Its Causes

All the cavities of the body are lined with a delicate membrane. There is one membrane called the peritoneum, which lines the abdominal and pelvic cavities. In these cavities are located the stomach, pancreas, liver, spleen, bladder, kidneys, intestines, and, in a female, the reproductive organs. Inflammation of the peritoneum is called "peritonitis."

DR. COPELAND

This inflammation may be of a general character and involve a large area. This is a serious condition. Or the trouble may be confined to only a small portion of the membrance lining. In that event there is less pain tenderness and tenseness of the muscles.

The prominent symptoms of peritonitis are severe pains in the abdomen brought on at the slightest touch. The patient can get relief only by lying on his back, or propped up with legs drawn up. This position relieves the pulling of the muscles of the sensitive abdomen. The breathing is shallow because of the tenderness. There is rapid pulse and a fever.

There are many causes for this condition. A perforating wound of the abdominal wall is very likely to cause inflammation. Rupture of a pus-filled appendix or of the gall bladder is almost always followed by peritonitis. Certain female ailments are accompanied by it.

Ulcer of the stomach or intestines which results in perforation of the abdominal wall is a common cause. Very often, when there is a pus-forming infection in the stomach, bowels, gall bladder or womb, peritonitis may result.

The first intimation that such a condition is present is a sharp, cutting pain, apparently in the intestine. The victim may have nausea and vomiting. Usually there is great swelling of the abdomen from the gases that form in the intestines. Likewise there is a drum-like rigidity of the abdominal muscles.

The disease comes suddenly and develops very rapidly. Usually in three of four days or a week it reaches its climax.

Should one of your household be stricken with symptoms such as these a physician should be called at once. In the meantime, the patient should be propped up with the legs drawn up and the shoulders raised. Then keep the patient perfectly quiet until the doctor arrives.

Mysterious Prowler Frightens Inmates of Hasbrouck House

Mrs. Hasbrouck's perceptions are as keen as her eyes, and I was uncomfortably conscious that she guessed my dismay—of course unaccountable to her—at hearing of the motorist who had taken a lodging for the night. But she made no oral comment and I achieved a lame sentence to the effect that cars of the make she had named rarely broke down.

"They all break down," she retorted a little grimly. "I'm right here on the through route and have a good chance to see them. Now is there anything else I can do for you, Mrs. Graham? You are sure you need nothing more for Mrs. Underwood? Oh! I haven't had a chance to tell you before. Your niece wanted to go for a moonlight walk, but, according to your instructions, I made an excuse to keep her inside. She didn't say anything, but I don't think she liked it very well—probably thought I was an impudent old hussy," she laughed comfortably—"but I couldn't help that."

"She couldn't understand your prohibition, that was all," I answered. "She told me about it, and when I had explained things to her she was content."

"I am glad of that, and I hope you can get some rest now. You must be terribly tired, rushing around as you have done."

"Yes, I am tired, but"—I faced her with sudden resolution—"will you wait up for me ten minutes? I want to come down and talk to you."

"It won't be my bedtime for an hour yet," she said, "and I'll be only too glad of a little talk. It gets lonesome up here in the winter time."

The gleam of Mary's light showed beneath her door as I reached the top of the stairs. At my knock I heard her cautious "Auntie Madge?" and I added her name to my affirmative answer that she might feel doubly secure in opening the door. I knew that she had been shaken by the message concerning Jack Leslie, which Mr. Underwood had bade me give her in lieu of his real reason for wishing to keep her close to me while we were away from home. But I was not prepared for the feverish haste with which she drew me into the room and locked the door after me.

"Oh, Auntie Madge!" she gasped. "I thought you'd never get back. I've been so frightened."

Her nervousness was contagious, but I drew a taut rein on my own rising excitement and patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"But I'm here now," I told her, "and nobody can get you. So suppose you tell me what frightened you."

"A man—watching our window," she answered, and I sat down in the nearest chair, staring at her.

"You are sure," I queried, although Mrs. Hasbrouck's news of the motorist who had sought lodgings bolstered my conviction that Mary's statement was not prompted by hysteria.

"Positive," she said firmly. "If you'll put out the light and draw the curtain I'll show you just where he was standing. He beat it as soon as he saw I was looking at him."

"Stand to one side when you draw the curtain," I bade her, with a reversion to the caution of my secret service days.

"I don't overlook that bet," Mary retorted. "Once is enough for me."

When we had drawn the curtain stealthily aside, we knelt, one on each side of the window and peered out at the yard below. Just opposite our window and but a few feet from it was the highest point of a grassy hillock. Anyone standing on it would be almost on a level with our windows and two or three large bushes were sufficient to shield a person so stationed from anything but the closest observation.

"He was right there, between those bushes," Mary whispered pointing. Then she shivered, and I reached up my hand and pulled down the curtain.

"But he isn't there now, nor anywhere else in the yard," I told her as I lifted her up and drew her back to her chair. "And—dearest—might you not have been mistaken about his watching this room. This moonlight night is so beautiful, almost anyone might yield to an impulse to climb that little hillock and look at the mountains."

"But he wasn't looking at the mountains," she persisted. "He had field glasses and he had them trained directly on this window. The moonlight glinted on the lenses and I saw them and him almost as plainly as I see you now."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Entertaining the Future Mother-in-Law

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I expect to meet my future mother-in-law in a few weeks. Is it correct for me to ask her to call at my home to meet my people, and, if so, to set a time for such a call, or should my mother call on her? M. S.

It would be in much better form to have your mother, as the hostess of your home, write a note of invitation to your mother-in-law-to-be, inviting her to come to your home for luncheon or tea or dinner and setting a definite date for the coming.

A Responsibility of the Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I attended a bridge party recently and as there were other guests who did not play, the hostess did not play. Will you please tell me who should have suggested when we should stop playing? Was it up to the hostess? N. H. G.

Yes. Since the hostess is the hostess, it is part of her responsibility to guide the activities of her guests, and quite naturally she would have plans for them—tea or supper, say—after the playing was finished.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, September 17

The astrological prospects are particularly gratifying and auspicious making for eventful and lively operations in both business and personal activities. With affairs well directed, since there may be a tendency to precipitance and turbulance, there is forecast for splendid advancement or recognition, with finances under a sign of increase and stability, attended by opportunity for fresh adventures and alliances. Social, domestic and affectional contacts are also under a benignant rulership.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of splendid openings and expansive enterprise with promise of new and desirable connections and a stabilizing of the fortunes as well as personal preferment or advancement. But these might possibly be lessened by rash, tumultuous or impulsive actions. Personal activities should also flourish and engage much attention.

A child born on this day should have a splendid and versatile equipment for success and happiness in life, being endowed with business, intellectual and social talents and graces.

I Gained 9 Lbs. in 3 Weeks. Pimples Gone, Look Younger

"I was run-down, complexion all pimples. Since taking Ironized Yeast I gained 9 lbs. in 3 weeks, complexion lovely, look younger."—Mrs. M. H. Harvey.

Thousands of "skinny" people write new Ironized Yeast adds 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks. Ugly hollows fill out. Bony limbs get graceful roundness. Blotchy skin clears like magic. Nervousness, indigestion, constipation vanish overnight. Sound sleep, new pep first day.

Two great tonics in one—special weight-building Brewer's Yeast and strengthening Iron. Pleasant little tablets. Far stronger than unmedicated yeast. Results in ½ time. No yeasty taste, no gas.

Quit being "skinny," tired, unattractive. Get Ironized Yeast from druggist today. Feel great tomorrow. Money back from manufacturer if not delighted with results.

Daring Belasco Comedy, "The Bachelor Father," Goes Across Well

By GEORGE SEIBEL

George Sharp and his Players must have been reading the aviation news and must have decided to do a little high flying themselves. Aside from the fact that Jean May, the new leading woman, dons flier's togs for "The Bachelor Father," this week's production is one of the most daring things the company has attempted. This comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter was a Belasco production, and they get away with it. Mabel Kroman even sings an Italian operatic aria, and gets away with it.

George Seibel

The whole crew gets away with all sorts of incredible feats and stunts. Alice Ann Esser, who was about 90 last week, is a buxom young woman this week. Lulu May Hubbard, while still musical, becomes a temperamental Italian prima donna. Most astounding transformation of all, and no pun is intended, Mabel Kroman blossoms forth in tavern tresses that go with net attempt to break into La Scala.

And they're all only attempting to keep pace with Edwin Vail and his scenic artists, who have put on the first act with three changes of scene in a way that would [illegible] the faith into his Surrey home staging. We are whisked from [illegible] not exactly a conventional frame-work for a play.

It is done deftly enough to avoid offense and get considerable amusement out of the embarrassing situation.

John Winthrop plays the feely and touchy Sir Basil with a pace—and gets away with it. He does not overdo his crotchets—and almost underdoes them. But it must be admitted that he has fully deserved the affection of his assorted family after he has won it.

The jewel of the tribe of course is the slangy and hard-boiled Tony, played by Miss May—and she gets away with it. This is another part that is not in her line any more than the shrinking violet Maria Credaro is in Mabel Kroman's line—but they get away with it.

It is the most ambitious thing the company has attempted in a long time, and it does not fall short of success.

COMEDY OF TYPES

What makes "The Bachelor Father" so difficult is that it's a comedy of types and atmosphere. Belasco in staging it could pick out his players from the 6,297 actors and actresses walking up and down Broadway. And he could take several months to [illegible] his atmosphere. George Sharp's Players had one week's time and had to get into Carpenter's types with the aid of a boot-ace—and they get away with it.

It's an enjoyable performance and at times an admirable performance. The comedy has more than a peck of improbabilities. People pack up to go from England to Italy on three minutes' notice, airplanes are cranked and started on the front lawn in 20 seconds and one of the three offspring suddenly acquires a different parent to live happy for ever after. But even these improbabilities do not put out the sore thumbs or jab us in the eye, so well did the company work together.

Paul McGrath as a solicitor, Robert Fiske as a doctor, Hugh Banks as a young musician and Charles Webster as a young aviator all entered into the spirit of the comedy and helped put it over. Somewhere in the wings the astral body of David Belasco must have been hovering to put zip and zest into the players. And he must have beamed benevolently as they all made their daring flight without breaking their necks.

BILLY ARLINGTON'S SHOW IS IN ACADEMY

Billy Arlington, tramp comedian, heads the cast of "Billy Arlington's Own Show," which opened in the Academy last night. This is the first time in six years that Arlington played here. Eleanor Boardman Wins Much Coveted Role in "The Great Meadow"

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 16.

The much-coveted lead in "The Great Meadow" falls to Eleanor Boardman, wife of King Vidor, M. G. M. director.

This picture will mark Miss Boardman's first screen appearance since the birth of her baby.

In winning the part the star successfully competed against almost all the blondes in Hollywood. The lead in the Mary Mattox Roberts novel is one of the plums of the year for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plan to make the production an expensive one.

Miss Boardman

Other players in the cast are Johnny Mack Brown, Billy Bakewell and Gavin Gordon. Charles Brabin, who did "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," is to direct.

The last picture Eleanor Boardman appeared in was Henry King's "She Goes to War." The actress has been a well known screen luminary both in the silent and in the talking films.

Incidentally King Vidor is due to sign a new M. G. M. contract any day now. Under the terms he will make three pictures during the next year.

CHILDREN HONORED

One of the next West Coast theaters is to have the first children's premiere in history. The doors of the new structure are to be opened in the afternoon, with a promised attendance of the children of many of the film stars. A special picture has been chosen for the occasion. The regular program starts in the evening.

This novel premiere is significant in its bid for a patronage that has fallen off greatly since the coming of the talkies. Hollywood studio recently determined in a check with exhibitors that children have practically stopped going to the movies.

THE TIP-OFF

Esther Ralston tells the story that while she was on her vaudeville tour she was given a civic welcome by the Mayor of a large mid-western city. After a parade down the main street, and an official greeting at the city, Esther thanked the Mayor for the reception.

Esther Ralston

He smiled:

"Why, that's all right, Miss—say, what is your name?"

HE'S ENGINEER

A cycle of railroad stories is approaching. Both Warners and R. K. O. have just finished one, and now Fox announces that Victor McLaglen's next role will be an engineer.

The name of the picture is "No Favors Asked."

This will be Vic's second railroad film, an earlier effort having been "The Baggage Smasher." Or perhaps it was released under another title.

By the way, Vic has just brought his wife home from La Jolla, where she was injured recently in an automobile accident.

NIXON AND ALVIN TO OPEN NEXT WEEK

"The Apple Cart," which the Theater Guild is bringing to the Nixon next Monday night, is the first play by Bernard Shaw to appear in six years. Eight years ago, Shaw practically announced his retirement but he has now changed his mind and is at work upon still another piece.

Seats are on sale in the Shubert Alvin box office for the engagement beginning next Monday night, of the mystery play "Dracula," as the opening attraction of the new season in the Sixth street playhouse.

"Those We Love," by George Abbott, and produced in the John Golden Theater, New York, last spring, will be played by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week. It portrays the influence of a child on the lives of the members of a sophisticated ultra modern family.

Nixon Restaurant To Open Tomorrow

The Nixon Restaurant will open its new season tomorrow night. Vincent Lopez and his orchestra will be the opening feature. He will remain for a week. The restaurant was scheduled to begin its fall season last night, but the opening was postponed because of the death of A. Turci, one of its proprietors.

"CALL OF WOODS" IS GOLDEN ROD DRAMMER

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

Cap'n Menke's marine troupers aboard the good ship—pardon, this yacht, race stuff gets into the blood—aboard the show boat Golden Rod, take the noisy audience into the great North Woods for drammer what is drammer. It's "Call of the Woods," no less. Dear folks, how those woods do call. And a hero and a trusting mother, putting her trust into the worst of her two sons and her suspicions upon her best boy, as well as a heroine, who is a maid named Hilda speaking an alleged French-Canadian dialect—while her rough and whiskered Pa speaks English—that is—well, almost English, answer the call.

And that worst boy—is he the dirty villain, though! Even his moustache is false. But he eventually gets come up with, the dirty sneak. And is clapped right into jail, where he tries to put his brother, to pay the penalty for his own dirty work.

But there is a relief for all this duplicity in the specialties between the acts. The whiskered parent of Hilda, otherwise George Clark, sings, "I Love a Lassie" and another ditty. Josh Dreamo, who has no part in the play, in blackface, makes stale jokes have new freshness and dances—"my impression of Pat Rooney." Vic Faust, the Swiss bell ringer, is on the job, as usual.

All fun for the audience.

"SCARLET PAGES"

. . . We assure you . . . is the prize picture of 1930. It is a successor to "Common Clay" . . . with a similar style of story, but bigger, stronger, and with a more compassionate, heart-tugging plot! In acting, it might be compared to "Disraeli," but in its frank soul's story it overshadows any talking picture yet produced! "Scarlet Pages," which opens at the Warner Theatre next Friday, we guarantee will give you the most pleasant entertainment you have ever experienced within the walls of a theatre!

ROBIN-CARD SERIES MAY AID BRUINS

FOLLOWING THE SETBACK suffered by the Cubs in being held to an even break by the Phillies in a four-game engagement while Wilbert Robinson's Flatbush fliers were taking three straight from the Reds and the Cardinals were bagging two out of three against the Braves, the National League pennant schedule is now at an important point that gives Joe McCarthy's erstwhile pace-setters a chance to gain on one or both of their rivals before Thursday night. Such a gain must necessarily result for the Bruins if they can win two or all three games in their series with the Giants while the Robins and Cards are cutting each other's throats in their three-game struggle in Brooklyn. That is unless Brooklyn or St. Louis wins three straight, which is unlikely.

Wilbert Robinson

The series between the Dodgers and Redbirds was preceded by long winning streaks for both clubs. The Cards won 22 of their last 26 games, and the Robins won 15 of their last 18, topped off with a string of 11 straight that beat the season's previous major league record 10 in a row, held jointly by the A's and Senators. Meanwhile the Cubs frittered away a comfortable pennant lead by losing 13 of their last 19 contests.

THE CARDINALS HAVE not lost a series since August 5, 6 and 7, when they dropped two out of three games to the Cubs. And the Robins have not been worsted in a series since August 20, 22 and 23, when they were bumped for five straight by the Reds. However, something has got to crack now that they are meeting hand to hand, and one of them is bound to lose this series if all three of the scheduled games are played.

That's where the Cubs will have a chance to crawl up. If the Cubs win two out of three in New York and the Cards win two out of three in Brooklyn, the clubs will stand this way: St. Louis .579, Brooklyn .578, Chicago .575. If the Cubs and Robins win two out of three the standing will be: Brooklyn .585, Chicago .575, St. Louis .572. If the Cubs win three straight in New York and the Cards win two out of three, the contenders will rank in this order: Chicago .582, St. Louis .579, Brooklyn .578. If the Cubs take three straight and the Robins win two out of three the figures will be as follows: Brooklyn .585, Chicago .582, St. Louis .572.

LEFTY O'DOUL has done more damage to Chicago's pennant hopes than any other individual player recently. Called into pinch action near the finish of the second and third events of the Philadelphia series, his two home runs in three times at bat cost the Cubs both ball games.

But for those two homers, the Bruins probably would have swept the series and remained in first place. Lefty is a Chicago discard, too, the Cubs having shipped him to Hollywood in 1926. O'Doul isn't the only cast-off to hurt his old club in the present pennant fight. Clarence Mitchell has started four games against the Cards since they transferred him to the Giants and has beaten them every time.

Lefty O'Doul

REPORTS THAT THE National League end of the world series will be played at the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium if Brooklyn wins the pennant, on account of the limited capacity of Ebbets Field, are without foundation according to President Frank B. York and Vice President Stephen W. McKeever, of the Robins. "If Brooklyn wins the pennant it will be a Brooklyn world series," York says. Under no circumstances would I favor any move to shift the series to the Polo Grounds or the Yankee Stadium. Rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, there has been no move in that direction. I can say officially that the series will be played in Brooklyn if Brooklyn wins. We have already begun negotiating for the printing of tickets for Ebbets Field." McKeever remarks: "To shift the series would be the saddest mistake we could make. Undoubtedly we'd sell more tickets and make more money at the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium, but we'd lose so much good will that it would more than balance that."

SINCE ALBERT ADAMS, 17-year-old Baltimore jockey, established an all-time record by riding nine consecutive winners on the half-mile track at Marlboro last week, he has come in for considerable attention in upper turf circles, and more than one prominent stable owner will keep an eye on him in his future races.

Whether he will ever develop into a big-time star, however, is another question. Jockeys of the front rank are very slow in the making these days. One of the stars of the past, in discussing that phase of racing, said there are fewer than a dozen first-rate riders on the big tracks at present.

This former luminary admits that Earl Sande, Laverne Fator, Pony McAtee, Sonny Workman and several others ride just as well as the great jockeys of long ago, but says the rest lack experience and have no one to teach them.

Albert Adams

Riders are not trained and instructed as they were in his time, he asserts, recalling that he spent a year leading horses by the halter before he was permitted to get into the saddle, and then had to devote almost another year to galloping horses in the mornings.

THERE WERE THREE times as many riders of real ability on the New York tracks 25 years ago as there are now, the veteran says, and all of them were developed as he was. But now, the old timer complains, the game has a lot of inexperienced boys who are allowed to ride in races after only six weeks of alleged schooling. Most of them have no idea of pace and do not know how to ride to orders, he says, but just sit in the saddle and let their horses run.

GALLNT FOX, 3-year-old champion and America's record money winner, will make his farewell appearance of the season tomorrow at Belmont Park, and in doing so may get his hardest test. He is to run in the Jockey Club Gold Cup race, the distance of which is two miles.

The Fox never has run two miles, and will be up against older horses, more experienced an perhaps better able to stand the grind. He has overcome big obstacles before, however, and is likely to do it again. If he wins this race, the son of Sir Galahad III and Marguerite will bring his winnings close to $330,000, or only about $3,000 short of the world record held by the French horse Ksar.

SEVERAL QUERIES HAVE been received as to how last Saturday's victory of the A's in Cleveland could be credited to George Earnshaw instead of to Bob Grove. Earnshaw pitched only four innings, and Grove, going in with the score 5 to 2 in Philadelphia's favor, hurled the last five. Correspondents call attention to a scoring rule that is understood to stipulate the starting pitcher shall not be given credit for a game unless he works at least five innings.

It is not possible to make a hard and fast rule for the award-

GRAYS WIN ANOTHER

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—The Homestead Grays and Baltimore Blacksox continued their series here yesterday and the Grays scored their fourth straight victory over the Sox. Oscar Owens pitched the Pittsburghers to a 7-to-3 verdict, being aided by Gibson's batting.

BELANGER COPS

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—In his first ring appearance since he fractured his hand several weeks ago, Charley Belanger, Canadian light-heavyweight, was awarded a 10-round decision over Joe Sekyra, of Dayton, O., here last night.

CHAMPION SETS FINE PACE AT SCHENLEY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Mrs. Margaret Curry, defending champion in the women's city golf championship, started the defense of her laurels in an impressive manner over the Schenley Park course today when she turned in an 84 to lead the early finishers in the 18-hole qualifying round.

Mrs. Curry, who won her title last year, scored a 44 on her outward journey and returned in 40. Mrs. Curry also is champion of the Women's Golf Club of Schenley Park. Her card:

Out	5	5	5	5	4	5	5	5	5	44
In	4	4	4	4	4	4	4	6	6	40—84

MRS. BRIGGS SECOND

Four strokes behind the pace-setter was Mrs. C. E. Briggs, who turned in a card of 44-44—88. The scores:

Mrs. Margaret Curry	44-40—84
Mrs. C. E. Briggs	47-41—88
Mrs. C. T. Haller	47-42—89
Mrs. A. J. McBride	48-42—90
Mrs. H. Mansell	51-39—90
Mrs. Ed Lockhart	65-65—130
Mrs. Martin Stearns	54-47—101
Mrs. J. Brandon	66-66—132
Mrs. D. McLaughlin	60-53—113
Mrs. O. L. Long	45-47—92
Mrs. T. M. Hopkins	53-53—106
Mrs. C. E. Brinkman	47-47—94
Mrs. S. Donald	57-49—106
Mrs. F. Fritz	61-53—114
Mrs. Josephson	51-43—94
Mrs. C. E. Briggs	44-44—88

PRO-AMATEUR PLAYOFF

Another contest of interest today is the 18-hole playoff to decide the victor in the 36-hole pro-amateur tourney staged yesterday at the South Hills Country Club. Charley Manning, pro, and Fred Brand, Jr., club champion, at Shannopin, are playing the Greensburg Country Club combination, Perry Del Vecchio, pro, and Harry Heller, amateur. Each had four ball, best ball medal scores of 136 yesterday to top the field. Fred Baroni and Fred Weppner, of Stanton Heights, were third with 137; Emil Loeffler and Joe Crawford, of Oakmont, fourth, with 138; Dave McKay and Jim Pappan, Pittsburgh Field Club, next with 139, while Jim O'Donnell and Herb Miller, Edgewood; Waltre Loeffler and John Graham, South Hills, and Walter Johnstone and M. A. Berkheimer, Butler, were deadlocked at 141.

CRAIG CHAMPION

George L. Craig, Jr., of the Allegheny Country Club, is the new state champion of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the American Revolution. The chairman of the S. A. R. golf committee won the Franklin Blackstone low gross trophy with his 84 to succeed J. Denny St. Clair as titleholder for the ensuing year. St. Clair did not defend his laurels. Low net honors, and the John L. Walker trophy went to Robert T. Hambleton, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, who scored 87-6—41. The Wildwood Country Club was the scene of the combat.

W. Lawson Blackstone, Penn State star, won in the second flight with his net 76. W. H. Cogswell, prominent Hannastown Golf Club star, having a low gross of 91. J. H. Johnson copped the low net in the third flight with a 79, while Dr. H. H. Sargent, chairman of the Pittsburgh Chapter golf committee, won the low gross for that group with a 95. Galen Hartman and W. J. Askin had scores of 80 to tie for low net in the fourth and last flight. Dr. H. R. Decker winning the gross prize with a 93.

DR. DECKER VICTOR

Dr. Decker was first in the putting contest, with 31 putts, R. T. Hambleton being second with 33. The new champion, Craig, captured the long driving honors, his aggregate being 843 yards on three specified holes. Both putting and driving were staged during the course of the regular competition.

In the blind bogey, Dr. Singleton had the winning number, 85, while R. T. Hambleton, Dr. C. G. Hughes, J. H. Johnson and Col. Franklin Blackstone shared in the prizes.

Tomorrow, Section 1, of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania Team League, resumes play with a contest at the Chartiers Heights Country Club, while senior golfers of the district hold a one-day affair at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Thursday and Friday, the caddie-masters and assistant professionals will stage their 72-hole championship at the Stanton Heights Golf Club, while mixed foursome tournaments are slated for Shannopin Thursday and Stanton Heights Friday.

MAJESTICS PRACTICE

The Majestic Radios will hold a practice session this evening at Phipps playground. Last season's players and any new players wishing a tryout are asked to report.

Karcis, Carnegie Star, Weighs Only 206

Stepping on the scales at the conclusion of two workouts under yesterday's blazing sun, John Karcis, Carnegie Tech fullback, found that he weighed only a miserable 206 pounds. This is the lowest weight he has ever attained during his college career. He has usually played at between 215 and 235 pounds.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: ALFRED KING, 14, WON THE GRAND AMERICAN HANDICAP—The thirty-first Grand American championship and handicap tournament was held at Vandalia Field, Dayton, O., August 18-23, 1930. The handicap proper was won by Alfred Rufus King, 14 years of age, of Wichita Falls, Tex. He is the son of one of the country's best shots. Never before has such a trapshooting event been won by a boy, and the fact that young King has been shooting only two years makes his accomplishment more astounding. King had an average of 79 per cent on a score of 97x100. WALTER MARANVILLE HAS PLAYED BASEBALL FOR 15 YEARS—Rabbit Maranville began his professional career with the Bedford club, of the New England League, in 1911. In 1912 he went to the Boston Braves, where he played good ball until 1920. The Pittsburgh Pirates bought him in 1920, and he remained with that club until he went with the Chicago Cubs in 1925. The following season he joined the Brooklyn Robins, and in 1927 he was with the Rochester team of the International League. That same year he went to the St. Louis Nationals, and thence to the Boston Braves in 1928, with which team he is now playing a remarkable game.

TOMORROW—THE RUN THAT DIDN'T COUNT.

FRENCH FACES PHILS TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Almost 100 miles from the danger zone of pennant fighters, the Pirates today are in this City of Brotherly Love for three engagements with the lowly Phillies, the first of which is set for this afternoon. After losing the season's finale with the Giants yesterday, there was no unusual amount of good feeling in the Pirate camp this morning. The men of McGraw apparently were a bit desperate as they took on the Buccaneers in the last game. They realized another defeat would seriously endanger their first division berth and the money that goes with it.

Hence they smeared the Pirates early and then coasted in through the last rounds of the fight. The score was 6 to 1.

SWEETLAND ON MOUND

Manager Ens will call upon Larry French to face the Quakers in the opener. Larry worked a couple of innings in the double victory over the Giants Sunday, but he should be in form to take on the Shottonites. The Pittsburghers expect to look at the slants of Southpaw Lester Sweetland. The Ensmen have not altogether given up the idea of vaulting into the first section, although they admit that yesterday's setback was a stinger. They still have a dozen games to be played, and a lot of things can happen in 12 fights. A lot of things have happened in as many fights, as the position of the Robins will attest. About 12 games ago the Flatbush crew was just a ball club looking for some place to go, and now look at them.

The Freebooters have an even string of triumphs and defeats since they arrived in the East. They dropped two out of three in Boston and then reversed these figures at the Polo Grounds. After playing three with the Quakers, the Buccos will return to New York to take on the Robins in two fights. Friday is an open date on their schedule, the contests with Uncle Robbie to be staged Saturday and Sunday.

Fred Fitzsimmons made the Pittsburgh hitters appear as ordinary swatters in the last clash of the Pirates and Giants. The knuckle-ball star, who fields his

BROWN TO GET TEST TODAY

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

A new angle developed today on the Meyers Bowl boxing card postponed from last night and now scheduled for tomorrow night.

The Boxing Commission physician yesterday refused to pass Harry (Kid) Brown, of Philadelphia, as the opponent of Baby Joe Gans, of California, in the main bout because he had a cluster of boils on one of his shoulders, and Young Saylor, of Charleroi, was dug up in a hurry to substitute for Brown. He was all ready to go through when rain intervened last night.

GETS ANOTHER CHANCE

Today it was decided that Brown should be given another opportunity to qualify for the bout and he is scheduled to undergo a physical test late today by Dr. J. W. McMeans, who turned him down yesterday. If he makes the grade, Brown will oppose Gans and Saylor will be paid for his trouble in getting ready to pinch-hit.

Gans tipped the weighing apparatus at 142¾ pounds yesterday, while Brown weighed 138¾. Black Bill, who meets Marty Gold in the other 10-round bout, weighed 113½ pounds against 114 for Gold. Mose Butch, of Oakland, who is subbing for Young Nanci, of Swissvale, and Patsy Severo, of Meadville, both weighed 121½ for the second bout, while Steve Senich, of Homestead, weighed 126 and Joe Gaudy, of McKeesport, 127½ for the six-round opener.

FREEMAN REMAINS HERE

Tommy Freeman, the new welterweight champion, who came here for the show last night, is remaining over until tomorrow night, along with his manager, Tommy McGinty, of Cleveland. Jess McMahon, former matchmaker for Madison Square Gardenden, who is interested in Gans and Black Bill, left for New York, when the bouts were postponed, but will return tomorrow.

BROOKLYN CLUB ONLY GAME IN LEAD

Associated Press.

Once more the pace-setters, the Brooklyn Robins, today faced the difficult task of turning back the threatening St. Louis Cardinals, as they did the Chicago Cubs last week, if they are to be the first team under the wire in the boiling National League pennant race.

The Robins, boasting a season's record winning streak of 11 games, today held a one-game margin over the Cards and a one and one-half game advantage over the third place Cubs.

While the Robins and Cardinals are battling in a three-game series, the Cubs will be called upon to meet the Giants, all but eliminated from the race, but still clinging to that mathematical possibility. The leaders:

	Won	Lost	Percent	Games Back of Leaders	Games to Play
Brooklyn	84	60	.583		10
St. Louis	82	60	.577	1	12
Chicago	82	61	.573	1½	11
New York	78	65	.545	5½	11

THE "IF" OF IT

IF the leaders win or lose today, they will have the following percentages tomorrow:

	Win	Lose
Brooklyn	.586	.579
St. Louis	.580	.573
Chicago	.576	.569
New York	.549	.542

In turning back the Cincinnati Reds, 13 to 5, yesterday, the Robins won their eleventh consecutive game, beating the Athletics' former 1930 record of 10 straight. The Reds started out like they were going to be tough, scoring three runs in the first inning and driving Ray Moss from the mound, but the Robins were out after the game and a chance to increase their lead over the idle Cardinals, a few of whom were in the stands.

WRIGHT OUT

Red Lucas, ace of the Reds' hurling staff, went the way of Moss as Brooklyn tallied six times in their half of the first session. There would have been one more run if Glenn Wright, who bounced a home run into the bleachers, had not overrun Babe Herman on the base paths. As it was Wright was declared out and got credit for only a single. After the first inning, the Brooklyn sluggers kept peppering away, rolling up a decided advantage while Watson Clark, Moss' successor, was holding the Reds in check.

The Cubs lost a chance to gain valuable ground, when they split a double-header with Philadelphia, the Phillies taking the opening slugfest, 12 to 11, and Chicago accounting for the nightcap, 6 to 4, after Hack Wilson had pounded out his fiftieth home run of the season. Lefty O'Doul's home run, with one out in the ninth, and the score knotted at 11-all, decided the exciting opener.

Guy Bush performed brilliantly on the mound to give the Cubs the second. He held the Phillies at his mercy until the ninth, when they rallied and scored three runs.

SENATORS GAIN

Washington managed to pick up a half-game on the idle Athletics in the American League, as they trimmed Ted Lyons and the Chicago White Sox, 14 to 9. Lyons was not hit as hard as his three successors, but was given poor support.

If it hadn't been for one bad inning, Vic Sorrel would have pitched the Tigers to a triumph over the Yankees. As it was New York defeated Detroit, 5 to 3, scoring four of their runs in the second.

The St. Louis Browns and Boston Red Sox divided a double-header, the Browns winning the opener, 3 to 1, and the Red Sox taking the second, 2 to 1, in 11 innings. Goose Goslin's thirty-second home run in the eighth decided the first in favor of St. Louis.

Nick Altrock Says:

DETROIT, Sept. 16. — The Giants dropped out of that National League race like they had rented the Polo Grounds for football games the rest of the season. However, McGraw's boys won't be missed, because three is still a crowd when you're fighting for a pennant in the final fortnight. The close race is working a terrible hardship on the scalpers in Brooklyn, St. Louis and Chicago. They don't know whether to go ahead and forge their tickets. I see the Brooklyn club has started taking orders for World Series pasteboards already. And you can't tell me the money will be cheerfully refunded if the Robins fail to land.

D. & E. GRID SQUAD SMALL, BUT POWERFUL

HURRICANE'S BACKFIELD REBUILT

(This is the eighth of an annual series of special articles written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of Tri-state district college elevens. The article on West Virginia University with photos of the Mountaineers in training will appear in Thursday's Sun-Telegraph.)

By JESS CARVER.
Sun-Telegraph Correspondent.

ELKINS, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Here in the very shadow of the Blue Ridges famous in song and famed in story, Crafty Cam Henderson, football and veteran master of the many arts of the gridiron, is fast shaping anew a Davis-Elkins football varsity and fashioning it well.

Crafty Cam, who has hooked upon his year's grain and fat who belongs in the upper strata of the nation's gridiron mentors, views the coming campaign in very much the same fashion as he has viewed others. It's just another season to Cam. He'll do the best he can with what he has at hand, and no man can ask for more.

Coach Henderson is working with the smallest squad in the district, one of the smallest in the country, but I'll lay you a quid or two that it is the best conditioned anywhere. Cam showed me a squad that numbered less than 30 men. He jotted down a list of those he had lost either through graduation, failure of ineligibility. This list included four cracker-jack backs, Rengie Warren, Wagner and Chloe Mitchell, a fine end, and Piggott, a guard, who suffered an injured back and will hardly be available for duty this fall.

DOES MUCH SHIFTING.

The situation confronting Coach Cam is this: He is forced to convert linemen into backs, guards into ends and centers into tackles. When he lost the great backfield combination of Warren Rengie and Wagner, it left him with only Smith around which to erect a new ball-toting structure. He'll do well enough, thank you, with Capt. Tex Irwin at fullback and the speedy, agile, smart and entirely capable Fairbanks at quarter. Fairbanks played on the line last year, but is a back by nature and a good one.

All right, he'll have Irwin at fullback and Fairbanks at quarter, with Smith at one of the halves. Smith would be a fixture in any backfield. The other halfback job is open, with young Shelton, of Elkins High School, foremost in the running for the job. Incidentally, it might be mentioned that of the Davis-Elkins squad of 28 men, no less than 12 of them are local high school products.

SHELTON LOOMS AS STAR.

Shelton, fast and a good passer, who is smart enough to learn the why and wherefore of defensive football, is being counted on by Coach Cam to come along as a star of the first magnitude. If he comes through, many of Cam's troubles will be lifted.

Other backs include White and Fields, holdovers from last year. Martin, a flash halfback, who is nursing a badly twisted knee; Woodford and Talbott, newcomers.

Irwin will do most of the kicking, and Shelton and Fairbanks handle Cam's not inconsiderable forward passing game. Smith or Shelton will go back to the safety position on the defense, probably Smith.

On the line, Cam finds himself much better off than he is in the backfield. Even with Irvin and Fairbanks shifted from their familiar spots at tackle and guard, he has five outstanding men for forward wall jobs.

Kepner, Whitefield, Vest (a reformed center) and Key are leading in the scrap for wing positions. Kepner, experienced and considered a good football player, is out in front. Vest, who knows defensive football, figures to line up on the other side of the line.

TACKLE BERTH OPEN.

At the tackles, the situation is not so good. Ingram, a veteran, appears certain to drag down one of the positions, but the other is open, with Wallace, Watring and Hodges in a three-way fight for the jobs, and ranking about in the order named.

Robert Markowitz, a Pittsburgher and a well seasoned player, and the Indian, Gurneau, are cinches for the guard jobs. They played 'em well last year and figure to play 'em as well this season. Corzine, who subbed at quarterback last year, has been transferred to a guard, and will be used there as a reservist. Ball, a newcomer, will understudy one of the two regulars.

The brilliant Hawley, an Indian center who has won all-America mention for three years and who is a past master on the defense, is a fixture at center. What a ball player! He stands back there on the defense, shifts the line about to meet the demands of the immediate situation, diagnosing the trickiest sort of opposition moves, and all the while remaining cool, alert and confident.

ACCURATE PASSER.

On the offense, his passes are accurate and snappy, his charging vicious and well timed, and his presence a steadying influence at all times. He'll be assisted this year by Kipp and Vest, provided the latter is not used entirely as an end.

The Scarlet Hurricane has a schedule of 11 games, four of them intersectional contests. The season opens September 27 with North Dakota State College at Fargo, N. D. The following Saturday, the Hendersonmen meet University of North Dakota at Grand Forks.

On October 10 at Alliance, O., Mt. Union will furnish the opposition; Furman University will be played at Greenville, S. C., on October 18, and on October 24 the Hurricane meets John Carroll in Cleveland.

Oklahoma City University, the only eleven to down the locals last year, opens the home season here November 1. November 8 finds D. & E. in Reading for a game with Albright. Rider College will be met in Trenton, N. J., Armistice Day, and St. Francis is to be played at Clarksburg, November 15.

The Waynesburg game is booked for November 22 and the annual battle with the Quantico Marines will be played in Grafton, W. Va., November 26.

FIVE NIGHT GAMES.

The contests with the two Dakotas, Mt. Union, John Carroll and the Marines are to be played at night.

The Scarlet Hurricane will be a Scarlet Hurrican right this year. Athletic Director Randolph has bedecked the team in scarlet from head to foot: scarlet helmets, jerseys, trousers and sox.

Eleven ball games, and, if things go right, you can count on Cam winning nine of them at least. Oklahoma City may give him a lot of trouble again, and so may Ralph Vince's John Carroll team. But I don't, if the remainder will be shrewd enough to cope with the smart eleven (if nothing else) that Crafty Cam is drilling here these hot days.

HELEN HICKS, MRS. FRASER SHARE LEAD

LAVAL SUR-E-LAC, Quebec, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Helen Hicks Hewlett, N. Y. youngster, shot a fine 74 in the qualifying round of the Canadian women's open golf championship yesterday but was forced to share the lead with the famous Ottawa star, Alexa Stirling Fraser.

Although sharing the honor of turning in the lowest score of the day, Miss Hicks, the defending champion, was forced to see the medal go to Mrs. Fraser. Under a special rule in the event of a tie for 18 holes and also for the last nine, the medal went to the player with the lowest total for the first five holes.

U. S. PLAYERS STRONG.

The strong United States contingent made an excellent showing in the qualifying round, placing 17 in the low 32 who qualified for the first round of match play today. Only one of America's hopes, Mary K. Browne of Cleveland, failed to make the charmed group. The Cleveland star turned in an 89, the highest qualifying score, but was eliminated on a playoff.

The draw for the first match play round with each player's qualifying round score follows:

Mrs. H. G. Fraser, Ottawa, 74 vs. Doris Vicar, Montreal, 86.
Jessie Hamish, Montreal, 85 vs. Cecil Smith, Toronto, 83.
Maureen Orcutt, New York, 81 vs. Mrs. J. C. Fenwick, New York, 86.
Frances Stude, Erie, N. Y., 86 vs. Frances Williams, Philadelphia, 80.
Mrs. D. Wanless, Montreal, 85 vs. Freda Sidle, Wheeling, W. Va., 85.
Peggy Watkin Pechin, 83 vs. Mme. Angelini, France, 83.
Mrs. Richard Dermont, Middletown, N. Y., 87 vs. Mrs. H. H. Martelle, Hartford, Conn., 86.
Ann Marcenac, Toronto, 78, vs. Mrs. H. Soper, Montreal, 88.
Mrs. E. W. Whittington, Toronto, 84 vs. Mrs. R. W. Gummich, Toronto, 83.
Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., 81 vs. Rose de Knapp, Gimbrel, N. Y., 85.
Mrs. Donald Rose, Toronto, 87 vs. Marjorie Ashham, Montreal, 80.
Barbara Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., 80 vs. Rose Rhoda, Montreal, 86.
Marion Bennet, New Britain, Conn., 85 vs. Louise Pomfret, Youngstown, O., 81.
Mrs. E. C. Lake, New York, 85 vs. Mrs. Vera Hutchings, Vancouver, 84.
Mrs. J. Dagenais, Montreal, 85 vs. Irene Hicks, Hewlett, N. Y., 74.

night, was postponed on account of rain until tonight.

Between Rounds

The proposed Johnny Erickson-Joe Thomas bout as the closing feature at the Motors Bowl next Monday night is not imminent, declares the latter. As a result, Matchmaker John Buck plans to show Emmett Keyes, the Hopewood City heavyweight, in the main bout against the best opponent available.

Following is the card for the amateur boxing show under the auspices of the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., in its North side arena tonight: Bill Carley vs. Benny Kinko, Abe Smerlenbaum vs. Walter Schwenk, Mike Sankey vs. Young Roberts, Pat Powers vs. Leonard Farrer, Kid Sterling vs. Young Arno, Young Wilson vs. Earl Mayhew and Paul Mosar vs. Henry Repole.

Jack (Kid) Berg, junior welterweight champion, meets Joe Glick in the main bout of a show at the Queensboro Stadium tonight. Willie Berger meets Jackie Pilkington; Mike (Kid) Gavilan, Leo Dappo and Kid Kaos take on Terry Roth in other 10-rounders on the card. Other bouts carded tonight include Larry Johnson vs. Fred Lenhart at Spokane, Wash.; Billy Rose vs. Jackie Purvis at Indianapolis; Cleo Payne vs. Freddie Miller at Cincinnati; Bob Godwin vs. Joey Perrino at Los Angeles; Young Kosher vs. Milton Jamison and El Kader vs. Lee Dumas at Louisville, Ky., and Eddie Palmer vs. Jack Hanford at Philadelphia.

Considerable interest is being shown by the fans in the professional debut of Lloyd Clements, of Nutwood, against Mike Kelly, of Pittsburgh, in the semi-final at McKeesport Thursday night. Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, returns to the ring following a long absence because of an injured bowl against Hal Krill, of Cleveland, in the 10-round main bout.

The program to complete for Hickey Park's show in Millvale Thursday night: Willie Hacker meets Happy Atherton, of Indianapolis, in the 10-round main bout and Hans Roberts and Billy Holt are in the eight-round semi-final, with George Chambers and Russell Powers in the second bout and Francis Portland and Johnny Brown in the opener.

A. A. U. Officials Re-elected for Year

All officers of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U. were re-elected at the annual get-together held last night.

William S. Haddock and John T. Taylor were retained as president and vice president, respectively. Henry J. Blum will continue as chairman of the basketball and registration committees.

FIGHT INQUEST TODAY

DUKES EASE UP WORK

The Night Riders of Duquesne University will enjoy their second day of a modified pace when they report only for afternoon practice today. The lighter sessions will continue until the West Virginia University game which will open the local season in Forbes Field Friday night.

Polishing the rough spots is the chief problem of the Duke coaches at present, a thing in which Head Coach Elmer Layden is assisted by Joe Bach, line coach, and has the voluntary aid of Dr. John Weible, guard expert. The overconfident spirit which seemed to hold the Night Riders in its grasp during the last week has been entirely dispelled in the Dukes by their realization of the serious contest before them.

Elmer Layden's men are anxious to make their first game a win and are particularly desirous of changing their last year's tie score into a win for the Red and Blue. Ira Rogers has probably the strongest West Virginia squad in 10 years and his men will have the same idea. A whale of a football game should result.

Tickets are going fast on the Bluff and in all Duke agencies, John D. Holahan, graduate manager, states. A mamoth turnout from West Virginia will invade Pittsburgh, fans coming from all parts of West Virginia for Friday's game. The motorcades will move all day Friday, carrying the Mountaineers to the fray, is the word from Morgantown.

Cardinals Obtain Pitcher, Infielder

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The sale of Paul Derringer, pitcher, and George (Specks) Toporcer, second baseman and captain, to the Cardinals was announced today by the Rochester International League baseball club.

HUNT BEATS RISKO.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Babe Hunt, Ponca City lightweight, out pointed Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker boy, in 10 rounds here last night. Hunt weighed 135, Risko 134.

position like an infielder, yielded only three singles throughout the nine innings.

HURLS GOOD GAME.

Steve Swetonic worked the entire game for the Buccos largely because Manager Ens had no other pitcher available. Swetonic was bothered somewhat by a bruised finger on his pitching hand, but after two loose rounds he found himself and then proceeded to hold the Giants to three hits for the remainder of the game.

But the New York hitters nicked Swetonic for nine safeties and five tallies in the first two chapters. In view of the de luxe twirling of Fitzsimmons, North Side Steve didn't have much chance for a triumph, but, once he reached his stride, he gave the Giants plenty of trouble. Steve certainly showed them something after the second inning.

Bill Terry was the batting star of the afternoon. The leading hitter of the league had been in a bit of a slump, but he came out of it at the expense of the Pirates. His card for the contest showed a triple, a double and two singles.

Fight Results

At Motors Bowl, North Braddock, Babe Joe Gene Young Sarino show postponed until Wednesday night; rain.

At Baltimore, Young Jack Gallagher defeated Tony Harwood, 8 rounds.

At Cincinnati, Leno Tom Hawkins knocked out Jack Townsend, 1 round.

At Macon, Ga., Ernie Sangora defeated Stiles Attaway, 10 rounds.

GRID CONTEST MAIL GROWS HEAVY

Going, going, go—!

No, not quite gone, but almost. The time is growing short in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's All-Time Football Team contest. The deadline is at midnight tomorrow.

Yesterday's mail almost swamped the contest editor, close to 1,000 teams being selected over the week-end by the fans.

All you have to do is to try to match an all-star team selected by James J. Long, veteran sports commentator of this newspaper, which will be announced in next Sunday's issue, along with the names of the winners of tickets.

If you guess the same team as Long, you will get a season ticket for all of Pitt's home games.

If you guess 10 of the 11 men in their proper positions you will receive two tickets for the Notre Dame game.

If you guess all but two members of the team you will receive two tickets for the Carnegie Tech game.

If you guess eight of the players you will receive a ticket for the Notre Dame game.

If you are right in seven out of 11 choices your reward will be one ticket to either the Tech or the Penn State game.

And if you get only six of the 11 right you will be able to see the Waynesburg game Saturday of next week as the guest of this newspaper.

Don't hesitate about sending in that team. Do it now, or you may be too late.

Bobby Jones off To Play in Merion

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 6.—(AP.)—Just two months from the time of his triumphant home-coming in July, after winning the British amateur and open and the American open golf championships, Bobby Jones left here yesterday for Washington on the first lap of his journey to the Merion Cricket Club near Philadelphia, where he will enter the national amateur tournament next Monday.

Bobby will reach Washington today, where he will play an exhibition match, paired with Roland Mackenzie against MacDonald Smith and Freddie McLeod. He will arrive in Philadelphia tomorrow and Thursday will be made an honorary member of the Pennsylvania Athletic Club, one of five Americans to be so honored.

John the Barber Dies of Infection

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—John J. Reisler, known in sporting circles as "John the Barber" and manager of Jack Dempsey before he became heavyweight boxing champion, died in a hospital here today. He was 57 years old.

Death was due to infection in a finger.

Football Contest Blank

Can you recall the Pitt football stars of yesteryear? If you are acquainted with the prowess of the gridiron Panthers, why not select an all-time Pitt eleven and win choice tickets to games which Pitt will play in the Stadium this fall?

James J. Long, sports critic and columnist, is to pick the team which will be regarded as "official." Match Mr. Long's team and you will receive a season ticket to Pitt's home games. Disagree with Mr. Long regarding the merits of one player and you and a friend will be "armed" with Pitt-Notre Dame game credentials. For information regarding other prizes, and comment regarding the feats of Panthers of the distant and not-so-distant past (which will be very helpful to contest entrants), read the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's sports columns each day.

Fill out the attached contest blank today and mail it to the Football Contest Editor. (Contest closes at midnight tomorrow.)

PITT LINE BERTH FIGHTS BREAK OUT ANEW

HIRSCHBERG PANTHER END 'FIND'

CAMP HAMILTON, Windber, Pa., Sept. 16.—With the optimists among the followers of the Pitt Panthers already boosting both Jim MacMurdo and Rip Collins as all-America prospects, another end has broken in with a bang and threatens to make the regulars step fast to keep their posts. Eddie Hirschberg, after several days of light work due to bruises, broke into scrimmage yesterday afternoon as an end for the Grays and broke up play after play the Blues started in his direction.

As a result, Eddie finished the afternoon's informal game as an end in Blue and today he is out to continue his fight. He is not satisfied to continue in the reserve role longer, but if he is good enough to oust one of the pair Sutherland is featuring in the end jobs he will indeed be good, for the work of MacMurdo and Collins has been high class.

Hirschberg has all the natural qualities of a good end, but up to yesterday had not shown as much fight as the men who were in the varsity jobs.

These uprisings all along the line are pleasing to the coaching staff, for it has everybody going at top speed now.

The fight for the right guard post is a classic. Ernest Lewis and Mike Milligan are putting on a daily scrap that is little better than a draw. For some days Milligan had the job all to himself and then Ernie got his dander up and began to show that he had some class. It begins to look as if Dr. Sutherland is going to have a good pair of guards after all.

Now there is fighting all along the line. Clark, Hood and Luch are fighting for the fullback job. Heller, Brown, Reider and Walinchus want the halfback post. Lewis and Milligan are scrapping for the honor of holding down right guard, and Hirschberg has made a belated attack on Collins' end.

Two fellows who loom big on the varsity are Jess Quatze at tackle and Big Jim MacMurdo at end, playing side by side, and smashing up all plays directed their way.

Okeson Clarifies Grid Rules Here

Walter Okeson, commissioner of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Football Officials, was the chief speaker at a meeting held last night in the Keystone Athletic Club by the local grid officials.

More than 250 turned out to hear the commissioner clarify the changes in the present playing code. Virtually every school and college in the district was represented.

GRID RULES Interpretations

PLAY NO. 14.

King, of Lehigh, punts and both Anthony and Vanderbeck, of Lafayette, who are playing back, signal for a fair catch. Anthony reaches for the ball and muffs it, but, before it strikes the ground, Vanderbeck grabs the ball.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that a fair catch has been made by Lafayette. In such cases, the player is not permitted to run with the ball. On this same play had Anthony alone signaled for a fair catch, muffed it, and it had been caught by Vanderbeck, the ball would have been dead at the spot where caught with no fair catch allowed. Again, had he muffed it and the ball hit the ground, either of the two safety men could have picked it up and run with it because it was a free ball upon hitting the ground.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Nick Cullop, Minneapolis, champion home-run hitter of the American Association, was purchased today by the Cincinnati Reds for a sum which Sidney Weil, Reds' president, did not disclose.

Cullop has been ordered to report immediately to Manager Dan Howley in Boston. He has hit 55 home runs this year and is batting over .370.

PRIMO GIVEN CLEAN BILL

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, the giant Italian seeker of the heavyweight throne, monopolized the late session of the National Boxing Association here.

Primo first threw his shadow across the convention when the business of ranking the heavyweight fighters was begun. Primo loomed just as big to the delegates when it came to rating his fighting prowess as he does to opponents when he heaves his bulk into the ring.

Primo passed every heavyweight in America with the exception of Young Stribling, of Georgia, even Jack Sharkey taking a back seat.

He was No. 3 in the ratings, with Stribling No. 2 and Sharkey No. 4.

Max Schmeling, of Germany, was No. 1, but that was a matter of mere voting.

Primo next took the spotlight when his California suspension was brought up. Again he was a winner, the association giving him a clean bill through the process of passing a resolution.

This resolution was to the effect that hereafter the N. B. A. would not recognize any suspension placed against a fighter by a non-member state. The resolution further read that, in recognizing the California suspension, the N. B. A. had been in the wrong, inasmuch as California was not a member of the association.

The following world champions were recognized:

Heavyweight—Max Schmeling, Germany.
Light heavyweight—Maxie Rosenbloom.
Middleweight—Title vacant. Dave Shade, Fred Davis, Len Harvey, Harry Smith, leading candidates.
Welterweight—Tommy Freeman.
Junior welterweight—Jack (Kid) Berg.
Lightweight—Al Singer.
Junior lightweight—Benny Bass.
Featherweight—Battling Battalino.
Bantamweight—Title vacant. Al Brown, Kid Francis, Vidal Gregorio, Harry Fierro, leading candidates.
Flyweight—Frankie Genaro.

Young Bill Hinchman Reports to Orioles

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Bill Hinchman of Columbus, baseball and basketball star at Ohio State University for three years, planned to leave today to join the Baltimore Orioles of the International League.

Hinchman has been playing during the week-ends this summer with the Charleston (W. Va.) club of the Tri-State League. He was ordered last night to report to Baltimore at Newark. He expects to start in left field immediately.

Hinchman's father is a scout and coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League and formerly managed Columbus in the American Association.

ing of games. The rule about five innings applies only when a pitcher is taken out for ineffectiveness, and the matter is left in the main to the judgment of the official scorer. If the first pitcher is taken out because his club has a commanding lead, or is forced to retire through illness or injury, or is removed by the umpire when his team has a commanding lead, he is entitled to be credited with the victory even if he has not pitched five innings. It all depends upon the reason for his being lifted.

Al Fay

THE AWARDING OF Saturday's game to Earnshaw is explained by a Cleveland critic as follows: "If Connie Mack had any thought of padding Grove's record of victories at the expense of his teammate, Earnshaw, he was disappointed, for the official scorer quite properly awarded the game to the big right-hander. There is a league scoring rule which says, in effect, that the starting pitcher need not be credited with a victory, even though he retires with the score in his favor, unless he has pitched five innings. However, Earnshaw was not batted out of the box, but was removed for some reason that escaped most of the 10,000 customers. It is true that he was being hit harder than is his wont, but still he had pitched three hitless innings out of four, and had allowed the Indians only two runs while the Macks were collecting five off Willis Hudlin. That was enough in the opinion of the scorer, to give him the victory."

LOCAL BOXING FANS are confident that Al Fay, heavyweight member of the fighting Fay family, of Charleroi, will add another victory to his impressive string tomorrow night, when he meets Dick Daniels, of Indianapolis, for 10 rounds at the Stadium in Chicago, on the same card that features Primo Carnera and Jack Gross. It is only a question of time until Fay is seen in the ring here with George Panka, of Homestead.

Such a match is a natural to decide the heavyweight championship of this region, and it will be a stronger card now than ever as a result of Panka's showing against Tom Heeney at the Meyers Bowl in North Braddock last week. Prior to that bout, Fay had figured to be a strong favorite over Panka by reason of having an apparently wide edge on paper form, but the fight that Panka gave Heeney has boosted the stock of the Homestead bricklayer many points, and when he eventually meets Fay the number promises to be a standout in the record of heavyweight competition hereabouts in recent years.

HEAT HALTS SCRIMMAGE AT TECH

Scrimmage was called off at Carnegie Tech yesterday, but the gates to the practice field were closed just the same. The number of injured men in camp and the blistering sun prevented any actual combat, but Coaches Steffen and Waddell spent both morning and afternoon sessions checking over the plays in signal drills.

They insisted that each man do his part the same as in actual scrimmage, and spent more than an hour in adding more weapons to the quarterbacks' repertoire.

Although the two teams that were running through signals received equal attention yesterday, it was noticed that one of the outfits has not been changed lately so frequently as the other.

Whether this means that some idea of the men who will start against Buffalo has now been formed or not, neither Steffen nor Waddell would disclose, but the team that has been together most lately is as follows: Rosenzweig and L. Flanagan, ends; Highberger and Fletcher or Stauffer, tackles; Dreshar and Sample, guards; Ducanis, center; McCurdy, quarterback; Eyth and Kavel, halfbacks, and Karcis, fullback.

Kavel reported ready for duty yesterday, but T. Flanagan is still out of action, and Ewing, the other interfering back, joined the injured club.

MANERO SETS GLENS FALLS OPEN PACE

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Tony Manero, Elmsford, with a 139 for the first 36 holes, showed the way to more than 130 professional and amateur golfers in the Glens Falls open tournament yesterday. Tony's score included a great 67, three under par.

On his heels came Craig Wood, with 140 for his day's stroking and in third place came another pair of veterans, Johnny Golden and Bobby Cruikshank, with 141 each.

Manero, Gene Sarazen, Golden and Cruikshank all shattered par, Manero and Sarazen with 67s in the morning and Golden and Cruikshank in the second round with 68 each. But where Manero tied his under-par round with a 72, and Cruikshank and Golden added 73 each to theirs, Sarazen, who on Saturday was runner-up in the national P. G. A. tournament, blew up in the afternoon to take a 76 for a 143 total, the same as Joe Turnesa's and Al Espinosa's.

MANDELL GETS VERDICT

JANESVILLE, Wis., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion, won the decision over Mickey O'Neil, Milwaukee, in a 10-round bout at the Fair Grounds here last night. Mandell weighed 142½, and O'Neil, 138.

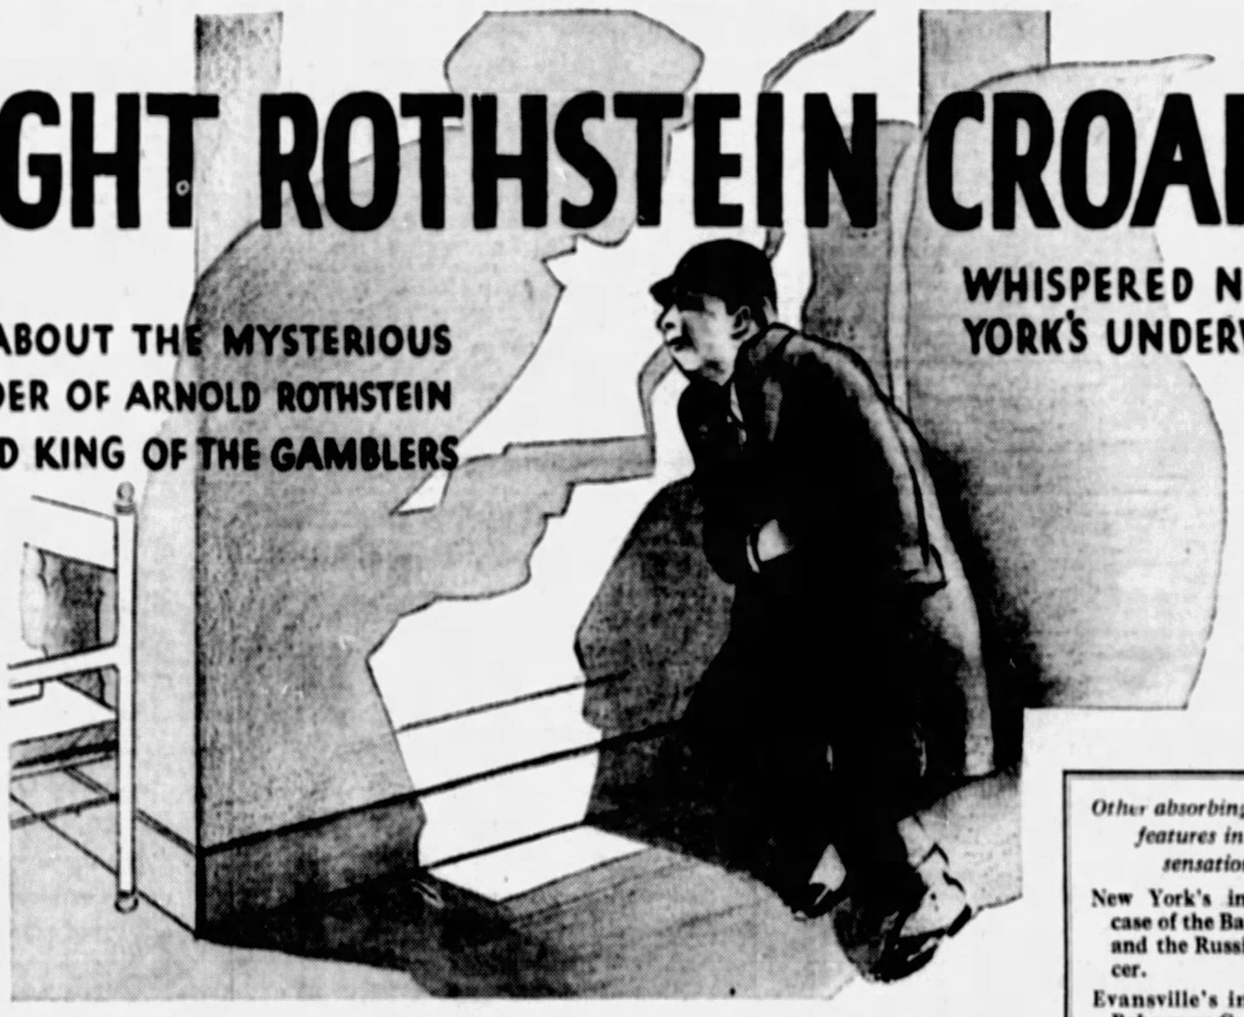
"TONIGHT ROTHSTEIN CROAKS"

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MYSTERIOUS MIDNIGHT MURDER OF ARNOLD ROTHSTEIN
THE TIGHT-LIPPED KING OF THE GAMBLERS

WHISPERED NEW YORK'S UNDERWORLD



CONVULSIVELY clutching his stomach, a handsome, dapper man staggered down the corridors of New York's fashionable Park Central Hotel. "An ambulance—I'm shot," he muttered through agony-clenched teeth. Four words, and no more. But those four words raised a furore that almost toppled New York's political structure to the mud! For the lips that uttered them were Arnold Rothstein's!

What was the hush-hush mystery behind the shooting of this Titan among Gamblers, this astounding cheat and liar who coolly tossed $100,000 on the flick of a card—who kidded his way to seven million in gambler's gold, but at the final cut of the cards, failed to kid his way out of Death.

Did he get the "belly-bullet" because he welched on a $400,000 card loss? Did a light-of-love beguile the trigger-finger that spat out Doom? Did a dope-nerved "punk" resent the Master Mind's slurs on the small-fry gamblers, and follow the advice that "a rat may shoot at a King"? Or did double-crossing politicians pull the strings that snapped the life of "the man who knew too much."

Now you may know! Read the TRUE Facts in "The Life and Death of Arnold Rothstein," written by brilliant Ed Sullivan—appearing in the great October issue of TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES.

Nothing is "hushed up" in this story. It gives the TRUTH in every amazing detail, unsparing of names or personages. Fully illustrated. Don't fail to read this absorbing revelation of Crime and Politics laid bare through the death of the greatest gambler of all time! Remember, the October issue of TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES, on sale to-day at all news stands!

322 Human Beings Grilled Alive! Ohio's horrible prison catastrophe

On Easter Monday, the Day of Peace, the alarms rang out in Columbus, Ohio. The great penitentiary, jammed with 4,400 convicts, was ablaze. What followed was the most hideous carnival of madness, terror and death in all annals of human suffering! Through the holocaust of flames chorused the death shrieks of 322 doomed men, trapped in a furnace of steel. Read of the terrible menace of fear-crazed revolt, of the quick wit of the Warden's daughter, of the individual deeds of heroism and sacrifice. All revealed in every TRUE Detail for the first time, in the great October issue of TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES.

The Grisly Love Murder on Lonely Road

"Well, old kid, I've just killed the woman you love." So laughed Clara Phillips, comely stage-star wife of Armour Phillips, as, reeking with blood, she burst into her husband's room. Based on the eternal triangle, with insane jealousy as the motive force, this horribly brutal hammer murder of a lovely young widow was the sensation of the country. Read this absorbing TRUE story in all its peculiar phases, from the feminine pal who squealed, to the dramatic escape from a Los Angeles jail. Complete with photographs, in the October issue of TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES.

Other absorbing features in this sensational issue

- New York's intriguing case of the Bank Clerk and the Russian Dancer.
- Evansville's infamous Bohannon Case.
- The Exposing of the Black Hand.
- Philadelphia's Blonde Baby Doll Kidnapping.
- The William Desmond Taylor Murder.
- How the Jersey Kid was Trapped.
- Confessions of Mrs. Frank Silsby, Master Criminal's Wife.
- Fred Burke, Chicago Gangster.
- A Test of Your Detective Skill.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH—TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES prints only the authentic reports of actual crimes and the apprehension of criminals. Every dramatic incident is told, absolutely uncensored, but always holding to facts, and facts alone. TRUE DETECTIVE MYSTERIES is the only detective magazine which deals exclusively with true criminal mysteries, and is a convincing moral lesson that CRIME DOESN'T PAY.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT 8.

When Washington players reported at the capital in the month of March, 1888, we were introduced to a new manager, for during the winter John Gaffney had resigned.

His successor was the irrepressible Ted Sullivan, one of the most refreshing characters baseball ever has known. He was a man of force, unyielding in his convictions, quick of tongue and with a flair for doing things differently from anybody else. He was a man of grandiose ideas.

Connie Mack

If he had been a tailor, he would have sought to make a suit of clothes for P. T. Barnum's famous elephant "Jumbo;" if he had been a sailor he would have tried to discover the North Pole in a yawl; if he had been president of the United States he would have essayed to annex Canada.

Always a non-conformist and ready to fence on any subject, nevertheless he was a likeable man, a missionary who did baseball a lot of good when it was in its swaddling clothes, and, besides, his knowledge of the game was profound. Everybody liked Ted Sullivan and his quaint ways.

FIRST TRAINING TRIP

Ted was that way as far back as 1888, for he had a southern training trip arranged for us at Jacksonville, Fla. I believe this was the first year that any northern club had the enterprise and audacity to take its players South to get in shape.

I may be wrong, but I cannot recall any such trip in earlier years from memory nor could I find such a venture recorded in the early books on baseball I have in my library.

The training program of the Washington team was far less pretentious than it is today. We left the capital on what became known in baseball as a regular "Sullivan coach," named, of course, after Ted. We rattled away in the morning and rode all day in an ordinary day coach. That was to avoid paying double Pullman fare.

Somewhere in South Carolina that night a sleeper was attached and our squad of 14 players found seven berths reserved for us. We had to sleep two in a berth.

You can imagine the difference today when clubs never travel with less than two luxurious Pullmans and sometimes part of a third, so everybody can get a lower and use the upper to store hand baggage. And now they retain these Pullmans throughout the journey day and night.

POOR LIVING CONDITIONS

Arriving in Jacksonville we found that Sullivan had made arrangements with a woman for the use of two cottages, or rather shacks, located on the outskirts of the city near the ball park. She gave us three meals and a bed for $1 a day each and yet this New Englander, who never had been south before, thought he was the luckiest man in America, although the accommodations were vile.

This same spring, Jim Mutrie, manager of the Giants, came down to Jacksonville with his rookies, just about enough to give him nine men for a game. He left all of his regulars up north. We played nearly every afternoon, after drilling in the morning.

We remained in Jacksonville only two weeks and started north again, but even this short stay did us all a lot of good. Manager Sullivan arranged for several stopovers on the way back to Washington so we could avoid any Pullman fares and make the entire trip in day coaches.

BARRED FROM HOTELS

Our first stop was in the delightful old city of Charleston, S. C. In those days baseball clubs had many difficulties persuading a hotel to take them. It was impossible to get in a first-class or even a second-class hotel and even a third-class hostelry objected to the players eating with the regular guests and herded us into a separate room.

Our meals in the untidy room of this decrepit hotel in Charleston were held at stated hours and the players sat down at the same time at a big table. There were no courses and all the eatables were spread on the table when the hour arrived.

No ball players ever tipped in those days. In this case at Charleston, Ted called the three Negro waiters together and holding out a big silver dollar, placed it near his plate, and, with a wink, turned to them and said:

"Feed the boys well."

The silver cartwheel laid alongside Ted's plate and when everybody was well fed and ready to depart, Sullivan picked it up and replaced it in his pocket and hurried out of the room. Not missing the angry glances of the three Negroes, we sheepishly followed and then hastily departed for the next town.

REJECTS WORLD TOUR

This old pioneer of baseball died at a very advanced age during the season of 1929, but for many years when we visited Washington he always came to our hotel to chat with me and did so just a few weeks before he passed away. I never failed to ask him if he still possessed his unspendable silver dollar.

The season of 1888 was uneventful in Washington, the team not making a good showing. I did a lot of traveling that year. In the spring I made my first trip to the South and at the end of the season I went to California in company with Grasshopper Jim Whitney, the pitcher, and Myers, our second baseman, and we spent the winter there. Our plan was to make expenses by jumping from club to club for so much a game.

When we arrived on the coast we found A. G. Spalding's world tourists, composed principally of White Stocking players, who were playing games there preparatory to boarding a steamer that started them on the first lap of their globe-circling expedition. Among the players taking this trip was John Kinley Tener, who afterward became governor of Pennsylvania and then president of the National League.

Both Whitney and myself were invited to join the round-the-world trip, but we declined. I always regretted in after years that I did, as I missed what developed into a wonderful tour.

However, Whitney, Myers and myself made out well in our own little venture. We saw everything on the Pacific Coast and made enough to pay all expenses and return East with something in our pockets.

These pressures are for rear tires. In front tires, for easier steering, use a few pounds more air.

The above are a few examples. Our complete schedule includes low pressure for every make of car—come in and see yours.

362,000 people hurt and killed annually in accidents caused by skidding! An incalculable loss in human life—lost time—permanent injuries. Untold added cost in hospital bills, wrecked cars, repairs and liabilities. What a terrific toll to pay when skid-safety costs so little!

Now—with the new General Dual Balloon—every motorist can be safe from skidding. This is skid-safety with a new meaning! True, low air pressure makes the difference.

See the accompanying chart. This tremendously reduced pressure, permitted by Blowout-Proof patented construction, fulfills the highest purpose of pneumatic tires—to be soft—and safe! For softness is the thing that prevents skidding. It has far more to do with sure, safe traction than any tread design.

Make a tire soft enough and you have that greatest of all road-gripping principles—flexibility inside and out that lets the whole tire "give" and cling on any road, regardless of wet pavements, snow or ice.

That is why the General Dual Balloon—with the world's lowest recommended air pressure—gives you skid-safety you will never know with stiff, unyielding tires.

Let us equip your car now. Be prepared for the greatest security you have ever known in slippery weather. Enjoy, too, the surpassing comfort of the tire that puts a buffer between you and the roughest roads—keeps your car quiet and new thousands of miles longer—makes broken roads and detours endurable and good roads perfect. The Blowout-Proof Dual Balloon challenges any comparison—Blowout-Proof, skid-safe, easy riding that higher pressure tires can never give!

WILL BANKERS and others please adopt a more encouraging attitude towards families anxious to build homes of their own?

Many readers have complained about their experiences when they sought financial assistance to build. A typical letter is given today, from a man of high intelligence, holding an important position.

WOULD YOU believe that only one-third as much real estate and building financing has been done in the United States this year as was done during the first eight months of last year?

Mr. Forbes

A compilation received yesterday shows that realty offerings of $50,000,000 and upwards totaled only $145,000,000 this year, contrasted with $49,000,000 a year ago. Bond offerings didn't quite reach $130,000,000, the smallest since 1922. Stock financing slightly exceeded $15,000,000 against $76,000,000 in the first two-thirds of last year.

After quoting that sentence, the reader already referred to states:

"These words from the sage of Northampton add emphasis to a problem that has concerned me for several weeks, home building. My experiences—and doubtless hundreds of thousands of others have had the same experience—raise the question: 'What good is a bank?

"Now, money has been rather cheap lately, and what better security is there than a first mortgage on a private dwelling? And isn't a citizen proposing to build to be encouraged? Haven't many of the biggest corporations pledged themselves to help President Hoover in his efforts to promote construction, thereby giving employment to many and bettering conditions generally?

"Yet, when an individual engages in home building and attempts to negotiate a first mortgage, he finds on the bill a handsome 'cover charge' of about $700 on a $20,000 loan—which, over a period of seven years, actually means the equivalent of an interest payment of 6½ per cent or more.

"On the other hand, if a loan is negotiated by posting collateral, 6 per cent is all there is to it, and then the borrower can use the funds for gambling if he wants to.

"It's a great racket. The banks which are supposed to encourage sound enterprises—and now is the time when they should do that very thing more than ever—stir up grave doubts in the minds of thinking individuals who analyze their leaning program. Not one of them will admit it is a bonus or premium. It is very carefully outlined as a service charge, even though the title search may not cost $100 and the legal contingencies may not total a similar amount, and those probably go to a bank director.

"What is the $500 balance for? A penalty for building and giving employment to workmen and putting money in circulation for materials?

"I suppose it would be inconsistent for any one to crusade for an improvement in this 'system.'

"'To him that hath shall be given."

LENDERS NEED to do far more educational work if they hope to convince the ordinary people of this country that their "service charges" are perfectly legitimate, proper and fair. The "haves" cannot afford to incite public hostility. A day of reckoning always comes.

P. & W. Va. May Be Sold By Pennsylvania

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

STEPS MAY BE TAKEN to divorce the Pennsylvania Railroad from several of the carriers which the Interstate Commerce Commission has allotted to competing systems. In railroad circles this action is generally expected as a result of Examiner C. V. Burnside's recommendation to the commission that the application of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia for the right to acquire the Wheeling and Lake Erie be denied.

The examiner's report objected to the control of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia through the ownership of a majority of the stock by the Pennroad Corporation. The later organization is a holding company, stock of which was originally offered for subscription to Pennsylvania Railroad shareholders.

The recommendation may have a far-reaching effect on future railroad merger actions of leading carriers. It indicates that the commission will not tolerate the use of holding companies as subterfuges to get around objections to the control of one system by a competitor.

New Plan Expected

A YEAR AGO the Taplin interests sold their holdings in Pittsburgh and West Virginia to the Pennroad Corporation. Under the sales agreement there has been no change in the actual management of the railroad. It is understood that the Taplins may buy the property back under certain conditions. In order to allow the completion of merger plans it now seems logical that an attempt will be made to either return the road to the Taplins or to transfer ownership to other hands not closely connected with the Pennsylvania.

This will not solve all the difficulties in the way of the formation of the system to which the Pittsburgh and West Virginia has been allotted. The Pennsylvania also has substantial interests in the Wabash, Lehigh Valley and Norfolk and Western lines which are scheduled to form trunk line system number seven together with the Western Maryland and the Seaboard Air Line.

If the Pennsylvania were allowed to retain its interests in such a large number of carriers it would be in the unique position of dominating the entire system. Apparently the commission does not intend to let the merger go through until the Pennsylvania has stepped far enough out of the picture to insure the fact that the system will be independent.

Other Lines Disciplined

THE COMMISSION IS ALSO making the Pennsylvania's opponents in the railroad merger game keep hands off the important lines scheduled for the seventh system. The Baltimore and Ohio controls the Western Maryland but has been ordered to dispose of its holdings. The Taplin interests have offered to pay cost plus carrying charges for the line.

The Wheeling and Lake Erie, which the Pittsburgh and West Virginia has just been trying to acquire, is owned by the Nickel Plate, a Van Sweringen road. But the commission has forced the Nickel Plate to place its stock in the hands of a trustee pending completion of merger negotiations.

The examiners report also objected to the fact that the proposal made by the Pittsburgh and West Virginia did not take into consideration the disposition of the other roads to be includeed in the system. This objection may be met in the future if the Taplin interests are successful in negotiations with the Pennsylvania for the acquisition of the Wabash and Lehigh Valley roads.

While the completion of the railroad consolidation plans of the commission is still far away, definite progress has been made towards untangling the affiliations of lines which have stood in the way of the mergers.

EXPORT COPPER REDUCED

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Copper Exporters, Inc., reduced the price of copper for export ¼ cent a pound to 11.05 cents C. I. F. Hamburg, London and Havre.

The price of copper for domestic delivery, which has been held at 11 cents by leading producers for some time, was cut to 10¾ cents yesterday with some custom smelters quoting 10½ cents. This is the lowest price for copper in 30 years. The new domestic prices compare with the 18-cent level in effect from April, 1929, to April, 1930, when the decline began.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The Calumet and Hecla Consolidated Copper Company has placed operations on a five-day schedule effective September 20, compared with a six-day week previously. Mines, mills and smelters are affected.

U. S.-European Oil Conditions Alike

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, returning from abroad, said that oil conditions in Europe are like those in America, "the industry there is suffering from overproduction and depressed prices for both crude and refined products."

ASSERTS STEEL PRICES FIRMER

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 16.—President Eugene G. Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, today declared steel prices are slowly, but steadily strengthening, especially for the principal products.

He predicts more satisfactory operating and employment conditio. . if the industry is able to stabilize prices, and indicates leading interests in the industry are more in accord on price policy than heretofore.

Grace believes fewer price concessions are being made now than for several months.

Stock Exchange Topics

Bethlehem's Resistance Subject of Comment On Wall Street.

Considerable comment along Wall street is being made on the resistance which has been shown in Bethlehem in recent sessions. Reactions have disclosed scale support in the issue. Only a short time ago, the stock was one of the bear targets. Probably the issue is reflecting a stronger technical position because of a short interest. Covering has been a factor when recessions have occurred, because the bears have been buying the stock. Reports have been heard of a new strong group being formed in the issue, but they lack confirmation.

Lack of leadership in the market always has been an important influence. That was emphasized again at times in the past week when the bull forces seemed to be without an active leader. When important groups are working for advances, the market becomes more active. It was noted recently that the market became unusually dull during periods of profit-taking and liquidation, and while recoveries came as a result of scale buying, aggressive demand was not in evidence.

Ease in credit appears likely to continue for some time. Concessions have been made in the offering rates for call money outside the stock exchange, which action normally is a forerunner of a lower renewal rate on the exchange. Another indication of money ease is seen in the financing operations of the government. Many construe credit ease at this time as reflection of the lessened commercial activities. It had been predicted that business demands for funds by this time would cause an upturn.

Occupying an important position in the general insurance field, as well as acting as a large scale holding company for common stocks, Continental Insurance has failed to reflect marketwise the recent appreciation in portfolio values and is regarded as conservatively valued at current levels. The company's management has been highly successful in selection of investments showing loss in book value of securities held in but four of the past 14 years. Net income, although variable, has been substantial in the aggregate, receding to $5.66 per share in 1929, from peak earnings of $8.21 per share in 1928. The annual dividend rate of $2.40 per share affords a return of slightly more than 4 per cent.

As Wall Street reasoned the stock market was being forced, for the time being, to compete with the attraction afforded by the international yacht race, and it looked as though the latter classic had the edge. At any rate the Street attributed much of the current sluggishness to the absence from quarters of a number of the financial community's more important interests. The bear element, so the story goes, sought to seize the opportunity for a further severe drive on the market. Most stocks gave clear indication of the absence of anything in the way of further aggression on the side of the rise, and the leaders yielded rather easily until the lows recorded on Saturday's dip were approached. Beyond driving the market off moderately bear efforts yielded little in the way of success, liquidation of consequence not being forthcoming as indicated by the shrinkage in trading volume.

New York public utility circles were immensely interested in the report which gained circulation to the effect that United Gas Improvement has secured either a large block of Consolidated Gas and Electric Light and Power of Baltimore, or an option on the stock. It was recalled that some months ago Baltimore interests moved to set up a voting trust for the avowed purpose of keeping control of the Maryland utility intact. Report at the time had it that either the United Gas Improvement or the United Corporation had been angling to secure a foothold in the company. The voting trust, however, was terminated several months ago, and until now nothing new has been developing.

Insurance Sales Higher for 8 Months

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Although new life insurance purchases last month declined 8.7 per cent in comparison with August last year, the total of new business for the first eight months this year was 0.3 of 1 per cent above the cumulative total for the like period of 1929, the report of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents to the United States Department of Commerce shows. The aggregate for August of all classes written by 44 member companies having 82 per cent of the total life insurance in all United States legal reserve companies, amounted to $929,008,000, against $1,017,113,000 for August last year. The total for the first eight months was $8,678,501,000, against $8,651,501,000 in the like period last year.

SHORTS AGAIN AT HELM OF MARKET

Pilot Prices Lower and Uncover New Weak Spots; Shift Attack in Rally

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The shorts again had the helm on the stock market today. Encouraged by the softness of grains and by the absence of important opposition, they piloted prices lower, uncovering new weak spots and numerous air pockets.

Rallying tendencies toward noon erased declines of one to three points in prominent issues but the bears thereupon shifted their attack to the farm implement and merchandising shares and the recoveries were more than lost. Trading tended to increase slightly on the decline especially during the earlier hours, but such commission house selling as appeared was inconsequential and the professionals had the market virtually to themselves.

Nearly all groups shared in the general heaviness although the selling shifted frequently as though the bears were seeking quick action before an oversold condition should develop. Fourpoint losses in International Harvester and Auburn Auto were accompanied by losses of a couple of points in Westinghouse Electric, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Macy, Gillette, May Department Stores, North American and Western Union, some of which had regained earlier declines of the same extent. Grigsby-Grunow was especially weak, breaking to 6¾, a new low, before meeting support.

Strong issues included Diamond Match and Lehigh Valley up 3, Safeway Stores, Jewel Tea, Norfolk and Western and Ingersoll Rand up 2, and Kroger Grocery and Curtis Publishing, which gained a point.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

Wall street's second thoughts on the result of the German elections proved to be considerably more optimistic, for it was said that banking circles here foresaw no danger to the reparations agreement in view of the Moderates' majority.

Nervousness over the unsettlement of grain prices continued to be evident in some speculative quarters which hold that little can be expected of the stock market while those futures are flirting with new lows. Wall street followed closely the cues offered by wheat and corn earlier in the summer and is once more inclined to pay considerable attention to quotations on the Chicago pit.

The search for changes and trends in business news, now a favorite occupation of the financial community, revealed little that was new. Copper Exporters, Inc., cut the price of the red metal for export by ¼ of a cent, but this action had been forecast in yesterday's reduction by smelters and producers.

In connection with signs that efforts are being made to stabilize quotations on steel products, there was some interest in the statement of Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem's president, that prices were slowly but steadily strengthening. There has already been an increase of 6 per cent in the price of fabricated stee' in New York.

REPORT WELCOME

Reports that General Motors retail deliveries had improved to a larger extent than had been anticipatd were well received, for they came on a day when one statistical chart that showed automobile production at the end of last week was at its lowest ebb of the year with the exception of the interval of the Ford shutdown. It was admittedly uncertain, however, when the General Motors improvement was indicative of a change in tone.

The weekly report of Federal Reserve member banks disclosed a rise of $16,000,000 in "all other" loans, under which heading commercial borrowings are included. This brought the increase for the past fortnight to $46,000,000. During the same period a year ago these loans gained $84,000,000.

Call money renewed firmer at 2½ per cent, but the rate seemed to carry little significance and was lowered to 2 around mid-day. Unofficially, funds were available at a concession of half of one per cent from the stock exchange figure.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 2 to 11 points, with new October selling up to 10.94 and March to 11.35 during the early trading, or about 8 to 9 points net higher on the more active months. Active positions ruled about 4 to 5 points net higher at the end of the first half hour.

The market held very steady later in the morning. The offerings responsible for the early setback were soon absorbed and late there appeared to be very little cotton for sale, while there were reiterated rumors of trade buying orders in the market from Europe for execution on declines. These probably led to some scattered covering and at midday the market was quiet at net advances of about 8 to 10 points on the more active positions, with new October selling at 10.95c and March at 11.37c.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Wheat and corn both scored price gains here today after initial downturns that reflected weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool. Advices were that despite heavy import duties, European continental millers are showing willingness to purchase wheat from abroad. Besides, friends of higher prices contended that the long continued break in wheat values was showing signs of having culminated and that recoveries were overdue. Opening unchanged to ⅛c off, wheat later rose moderately all around. Corn started ⅛c down to ⅛c up and afterward made a general rally.

UNCERTAINTIES REAL JOY OF BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Greater stability in business as a means of regularizing employment is, of course, greatly to be desired, but complete stabilization would usher in a regime of deadly monopoly.

The excitement and joy of business spring from uncertainty, challenge, wit and fascination. Partisans of exhilarating qualities. If business men knew months in advance exactly the quality and quantity of merchandise which consumers would demand, business would become mere technology and would be robbed of its lure and fascination. Parenthetically it should be added that this writer favors rational programs to give a greater degree of stability to business and thinks that the lack of such a social program is evidence that we are still as a nation in our economic childhood.

Mr. Rukeyser

In connection with the uncertainty concerning the future of business Henry Ford recently remarked that when prosperity first returned the public would not know it. The contemporary observer is in the position of the explorer in unchalted mountains. As he approaches an ascent in foggy weather, he cannot be certain whether he is reaching a great mountain or merely a short hill, which leads only to another descent. Business in the United States at this time is ascending. The issue is how far and how permanent the ascent will be.

EXTENT UNCERTAIN

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economist of the Cleveland Trust Company and experienced explorer of economic mountains and valleys in his monthly surveys concedes:

"No one can yet be sure that this advance may not prove disappointing, like that of last spring, but there are reasons for believing it is not likely to."

In giving the roll call of reasons for optimism the Cleveland Bear says:

"Increased output in some of the fundamental lines of productive industry appear to give evidence that a turn is in the making. Moreover other economic indicators are acting as they have in past cycles when depression was giving way to the beginnings of recovery. The decline in business has lasted more than a year. Bond prices have been rising for a good many months. Dgives against stock prices fail to gather much headway. The long decline in commodity prices appears to have been checked, both here and in some foreign countries. This may be a real turn."

Irrespective of immediate trend any business executive, investor or speculator who is not alert to the possibility of a gradual economic improvement is as astigmatic as the sucker traders who a year ago were blind to the possibility of a great letdown in prosperity. Nowadays it is especially dangerous to stake capital on moods and emotions rather than on an intelligent economic analysis based on an impartial reading of current trade statistics.

The drought has got off the first page, and as the excitement of the event has faded the country has gradually accumulated data as to the extent of the damage. An able statistician estimates that the gross aggregate farm income from the crop year 1930 will be 8 per cent less than in 1929.

BLAMES DROUGHT

In commenting on the causes of the shrinkage, which is less than suffered by most industries, Henry M. Bodwell, of the Standard Statistics Company, pointed out:

"Chief among the causes of this drastic deflation of farm values may be the drought itself and the inability of the drought to cure the fundamental difficulties evolving around worldwide over-production of agricultural commodities.

"At the door of the former—that is to say, the drought itself—may be laid the sharp loss in corn. Another victim of the drought is hay, although in this instance an excellent level of prices is more than offsetting reduced harvests."

Perhaps a hundred important corporations refused to take cognizance of depression and reported increased profits for the first half of 1930. These depression-proof companies, including numerous public utility, electrical equipment, tobacco, foodstuffs and amusement companies, should interest those who buy common stocks for long term investment rather than speculation. The pure speculator, who makes profits out of fluctuations, can, of course, get more action out of the prince and pauper" type of companies, which includes the coppers. Shipbuilding seems to act in accordance with its own cycle, and has been distinctly active in recent months on account of the stimulus given by subsidies under the White act.

Stockholders Take Warner Offering

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The recent offering of common stock of the Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., has been taken up by stockholders. The offering was underwritten by Goldman, Sachs and Hayden, Stone. Right to subscribe expired last night.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. Price movement of bonds was a quiet affair today. Traders showed little inclination to bid briskly as they have in many sessions in recent weeks and the general tone was steady to firm.

DAILY TRUE STORY

"Always burn your bridges behind you," Col. Marston said, sententiously.

"Britches?" asked his mischievous daughter, Dolly.

"Bridges! Bridges!" the colonel thundered.

"Oh! Bridges, mean?"

Young Dr. Jim Ash dated Dolly. Father liked Jim, but laughed at the idea of their being married. Dolly was but [illegible] Jim was a country doctor. Colonel Marston thought that Jim, who accepted a that he was satisfied with a small practice of a humble Dolly.

Plain [illegible] a battle, life was a battle, and the strong best. Colonel Marston [illegible] Dolly.

Quite so, Colonel," Dr. Jim agreed.

If you stay in [illegible] nowhere. I can't afford to [illegible] charge in the office [illegible] forge ahead. That's [illegible] motto has always been. B[illegible] you to date behind."

And then you call it a good idea. Doctor Jim, [illegible]

"Britches" [illegible] ugly.

Dolly giggled.

"You almost made me [illegible] in. Your father's face [illegible] would have been terrible. I'm doing my best to make him see that all the men in the army cannot be army officers and that a young doctor would make a quite as good a husband as a young lieutenant."

"Dad has some ideas," Dolly muttered.

He's a great old chap, and I like him, despite the fact that he is a stubborn old war horse.

Col. Marston's summer home overlooked a peaceful valley through which Silver River wound in and out like a narrow blue ribbon crossing and recrossing the mile of private road belonging to the colonel's estate.

Falls in Love

The colonel retired lived in Washington and still dropped into the War Office now and then to give advice. His wealth came from an ancestor who had never been an army man. One doesn't buy thousand-acre estates in the Blue Ridge region on an army officer's salary.

Dr. Jim Ashley had a private hospital in the Washington suburbs. Dolly had been taken there when, while at a select finishing school, she had cracked her shoulder blade at field hockey.

Dr. Jim fell in love with her at once. He admitted it.

Dolly did the same thing, but she hadn't admitted it for more than a year. Before she left for the country estate this year she and Dr. Jim had an understanding.

"Father will never consent to any other son-in-law than an army officer," she warned him.

"Perhaps I can get around him," Doctor Jim said, hopefully.

He had capable men at his hospital and so he had taken a vacation. Ostensibly he was fishing on the other side of Chimneypot Mountain and "hearing" that Dolly was at the big estate, had driven over to see her.

He came back again two days later with an attractive mess of trout for which the Colonel was grateful.

The next day he dropped in with something in a jug such as only doctors are supposed to be able to secure.

The Colonel used it in a concoction with mint and powdered sugar and ice with great success.

Doctor Jim was a good listener. The Colonel loved to live his campaigns over again.

Several times he had brought up his pet argument—that life was like a battle and unless one took the offensive, one wouldn't win any victories.

Doctor Jim gazed down the valley.

"Beautiful," he said.

He glances toward the open windows and heard the tinkle of ice in a far room, which enabled him to hop up and kiss Dolly.

"More beautiful, most beautiful, I should say," he told her, staring down at her pretty face and mischievous blue eyes.

"I am coming over in a couple of days with more trout, and right after that I'm going to go to battle with this Col. George Washington Marston, father of yours."

Tells of War

"Good luck to you, dear."

"I'll make him see that I'm just the right sort of a son-in-law for him."

"Don't lose your temper, dear, whatever you do. Dad will never consent. He believes I am made for an officer's wife."

"Ahem, or doctor?"

They sat and talked about this and that. Dr. Jim wanted to suggest that he and Dolly take a little walk, but didn't quite dare.

The colonel stared down across his broad acres at Silver River.

"Yes, sir," he said, as though they had been discussing the great war, "they tried to tell me I was rather old to go to the front, but I convinced them differently. This terrain down there reminds me considerably of one sector in France. We got the airplane maps, and after the boys were ready to go over the top I saw to it that the bridges were burned. The young officers and men knew that they had got to hold what they had taken."

Dr. Jim listened patiently, saying a judicious word here and there.

Father Objects

Dolly [illegible] brought [illegible] of [illegible] beaux, [illegible] of [illegible] to the attention [illegible] of the Colonel. They had a pleasant visit. After Doctor Jim had gone the Colonel said to Dolly:

"If that young man were only an army officer he would be almost perfect."

He is perfect enough now, Dad."

Her father looked at her keenly.

"Don't be getting sick over him. When I give you away in marriage I will wear my full uniform and you and your army officer husband will march out under an arch of crossed swords."

But suppose I don't find the army officer man I love."

Nonsense, my dear, every girl loves an army officer."

She managed to send a note over to Doctor Jim and tell him all about the conversation.

And so a few days later Doctor Jim was quite prepared to be turned down when he came over to the Colonel's place.

They chatted for a while and Dolly found some excuse to leave them because she couldn't very well sit in while her father and her lover fought it all out about her.

After a little talk Doctor Jim decided to beard the lion in his den or on his front veranda.

"Colonel, I want to marry Dolly," Doctor Jim said.

Col. Marston stroked his white goatee and smiled pleasantly.

"A great many fine boys have wanted to do the same thing. Dolly is going to marry an officer."

"But what if she prefers me?"

"Nonsense, what does a girl know about such things?"

"In these days of, a girl is supposed—"

"You are a most estimable young man. I am sorry to refuse you, but why waste words. You cannot marry Dolly."

Doctor Jim stood up and offered his hand. They shook.

"I feel honor-bound to tell you, Colonel, that I shall make every effort to marry Dolly, even without your consent."

"Very good, young man. I admire your honesty, but warn you that I shall permit no such marriage. Now, sir, suppose you go in and have a little good-bye talk with Dolly."

"Glad to talk with her, Colonel, but it won't be good-bye."

"The grounds won't be open to you, sir, after today."

An Elopement

Doctor Jim bowed, went in and talked with Dolly. He talked long and earnestly. He and the Colonel said their good-byes rather stiffly.

The Colonel found Dolly crying and knew better than to make matters worse right then by talking.

He went down to his great garage.

"Johnson," he said, "keep the big car oiled and fueled and ready to jump into and start. We may have to chase someone before many nights, and see that you or Perkins are always on hand to hop in and drive me hell-bent down the valley."

"Yes, sir," Johnson said, saluting. He was an old top sergeant, recently retired.

The Colonel watched Dolly pretended to be sad when with him, but when she thought she was alone he noticed that she was quite cheerful.

He took long afternoon naps and kept dressed and awake night after night.

One night he heard a slight noise outside. He rushed out. Two figures ran across the terrace to the drive and hopped into a car. The Colonel ran for the garage. His big car could overtake anything around there.

Soon Johnson was driving him down the valley. There was a sudden flare ahead.

The wooden bridge was burning.

Further on another flare shot up in the night, and a third.

Colonel Marston sat in his car and glared. Then he smiled.

By gad, he took my advice, he burned his bridges behind him!"

"Yes, sir," said Johnson who didn't quite understand.

When the Colonel got a wire from Dolly and Doctor Jim on their honeymoon, he answered it as follows:

"Done like an officer and a gentleman. All is forgiven."

Fireworks Ban Demanded By Fourth Fatalities

True to his promise, Councilman Robert Garland has introduced in Council an ordinance prohibiting the sale or use of fireworks, as well as possession with intent to sell or use. The penalty for violation is $100 fine or 30 days' imprisonment.

Whether the measure is the best that can be devised it would be premature to undertake to say. Desirable amendments may be suggested in committee.

One thing is certain: that there is need for a more stringent ordinance than that now on the books, which only forbids selling, and is not vigorously enforced. The fatalities from fireworks accidents last Fourth of July showed indisputably the need for the ban.

Councilman Garland is to be commended for forcing the issue, and that at a time when fireworks accidents had been temporarily relegated to the background.

Allegheny County Lags in Not Holding Annual Fair

The season of county fairs, now nearing a close, appears to have been satisfactory. The Beaver County Fair, which ended Saturday, is declared to have been the best in years. It was noteworthy not only for its agricultural exhibits and horse races, but also for its great historical pageant, directed by John S. Duss, of the Harmony Society.

These fairs are given year after year. Apparently they are considered well worth while. The question arises why Allegheny County does not have one.

If the answer should be that Allegheny is not an agricultural but a manufacturing county, attention can be called to the report just issued by the Chamber of Commerce which shows the county to be far ahead of many others in the value of its farms and farm products. And for that matter Beaver County, with its great mills and manufacturing plants at Ambridge, Aliquippa and Beaver Falls, might be classed as a manufacturing county, too.

Manufactures lend themselves to exhibition as well as farm products. They were among the most interesting exhibits at the old Western Pennsylvania Exposition. Andrey Avinoff, director of Carnegie Museum, impressed by a great permanent industrial museum he visited at Munich this summer, hopes the day may come when Pittsburgh will have one, too.

Pending the arrival of that day, arrangements might be made to show some of the interesting things in our steel, glass, electrical, chemical and other important industries, in connection with an exhibition of our agricultural products at a county fair.

Such an affair would afford opportunity for numerous other things of which we are now deprived—of historical pageants, for example, like that which Mr. Duss presented at the Beaver County fair.

The proposed Town Hall, to which the County Commissioners are giving further consideration today, would be just the place to hold the show.

Questionable Propriety Of Ward Chairman's Gift

A merchant applied at the proper office in the City-County Building last June for a permit to sell fireworks. "See your ward chairman," he was told.

Remembering that man's experience, many of the Squirrel Hill merchants who have been solicited for funds with which to buy an automobile for the ward chairman have doubtless thought it no more than prudent to contribute. If their remembrance of the fireworks incident was poor, it was probably jogged by the solicitor's suggestion, in asking for a contribution, "You may need a favor some day." But not a few of the merchants in all probability paid their quota grudgingly and muttered something under their breath about "holdup."

It is, of course, a polite and probably not illegal form of extortion. There is just the slightest hint in the solicitation that retaliation may follow a refusal to contribute—that the favor that will be sought some day will be withheld.

It is an outrage that merchants should be forced to ask favors of ward chairmen, an outrage that ward chairmen should be entrusted by the municipal authorities with power to confer them.

Pennsylvania Not Free From Lynching Spirit

Threats of enraged Potter County citizens to take summary vengeance on a prisoner accused of a hideous crime are a reminder that Pennsylvania is not free from the lynching spirit. It is just as well, perhaps, to be reminded now and then that our record in regard to lynchings is not unsullied, lest we assume too arrogant an attitude towards states with black records.

It is true Pennsylvania has had only three lynchings in the last 40 years, as compared, say, with 460 in Georgia; but on the other hand the New England states and New Jersey have not had a single case in which a man accused of crime was executed by a mob. Honor to them!

In Georgia a week or two ago the National Guard, called out to protect a prisoner from a mob, suffered the mob to kill him—an outrageous thing which ought to result in some courts-martial.

The Pennsylvania state police were called out to protect the Coudersport prisoner. That means that he is safe—until a jury can pass on his case.

Flagpole Sitters

By Nelson Harding

The two old sportsmen, full of zest,
Continue their endurance test,
And as they've done for eighty years,

With their respective flags run up
They're still competing for that Cup,
And friendly sport is never dull
For Uncle Sam and Johnnie Bull.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Jungle Life

Big game explorer returns from Africa without request and announces that the jungle is a bed of pansies. The native has been civilized by our police reports.

Cannibals are going in for balanced diets. The pigmy tribes are making our gang comedies.

Polygamy has almost disappeared and may have to be revived by a government subsidy.

The practice of eating white tourists has been reduced to a minimum. Well, a minimum is a lot if you don't like being bitten by strangers.

Superstition and witchcraft are confined to week-end parties. The big city influence has manifested itself and monkeys are throwing pineapples instead of cocoanuts.

The tribes no longer declare war on one another. They've discovered that they can do more damage in a peace conference.

The chirpings, screamings and howlings of the jungle night have been tuned out by the superior gutterals of Amos and Andy dialing from remote control. When the dawn comes up like thunder it's in technicolor.

The white man's motion pictures have made the savages realize that they are 15 mezzanines above the real underworld. Coomba Koopa Gorty was the king of the head hunters. Now he is searching for quinine pills on a miniature golf course.

The head hunters have stopped hunting heads and are lifting faces.

After reading last week's papers the toughest chief of the Grumpa Wikks climbed down out of his ancestral palm and sent all his medals to a real tree-sitter in Ohio.

Mr. Ford has also donated his valuable subscription toward decimating the rugged and valiant boomerang juggler of the festooned tropics. How are you going to be a man's man in the rumble seat of a flivver with your wife driving?

The tribes are starving. Every time they climb a date palm for food they are kicked in the face by Shipwreck Kelly.

At the foot of every orange grove is a man in a white apron who sells the juice to you well diluted. The savage is civilized even if he still has his underwear tattooed on for the winter.

The jungle ladies may wear grass skirts. But careless motorists are arrested for starting prairie fires. Africa is thoroughly renovated and modernized and we shall soon see verification of this in the increased death rate for 1930.

CHANCE AND DESIGN

By Archibald Henderson

One of the persistent problems which continue to haunt the human being is the problem of defeating chance by design. Games of chance are irrational. There is no way to tell whether the toss of a coin will give heads or tails. There is no way to predict with certainty whether the baby to be born will be a boy or a girl. Writers on probability have expressed the opinion, however, that after a long succession of a coin falling heads, a chance to tails is imminent. But this cannot be true, if the toss is fair. No previous toss can affect the next toss. If a coin has fallen heads a hundred times in succession, the next toss is as likely to be heads as tails. In the long run, as we say—although we don't know how long the run may be!—there will be as many tails as heads.

This is very difficult to believe, namely that each toss is entirely inaffected by what has gone before. Yet the bridge player finds it comprehensible that a hand containing 13 cards all of one suit is not more unlikely than any other combination of cards. The probability of one hand is the same as the probability of any other.

At Monte Carlo, a definite maximum is arbitrarily established. This is not done solely to give the bank an advantage, but partly to set a limit to the play. Otherwise enormous cash reserves would have to be kept by the bank. Furthermore, it is true enough that there is an advantage to the bank, since a few huge wins might take away the whole of the profits earned over the small stakes.

Many players favor progressions or martingales, as they are called. In these martingales, there is an increased stake after a loss. The simplest progression is the system of doubling the stake after each loss. Each win gives a net profit of one, if the stakes run 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32—. The system breaks down if, after a succession of losses, the next stake would exceed the permitted maximum.

Many players scorn the results of mathematical theory, and attach no faith to them. But observation, for a sufficiently great number of spins at roulette, for example, shows that theory and practice are in excellent accord. Take the example regarding sequences of one color from five repitions upwards, compiled from an authentic record of 68,000 spins. This example, cited by Norwood Young in Fortune, is as follows:

	Sequences of					More than
	5	6	7	8	9	10	10
Actual	1062	534	270	132	64	30	33

It will be noted, in this table, that the number of times each sequence appears is about half that of the previous sequence, as exactly shown in the second line. It is an extraordinary fact, confirmed by both theory and practice, that when a color has appeared five or more times in succession, the probability of a reptition of a color is the same as it was before, one-half.

Of the various schemes devised to circumvent the maximum, one of the best known is said to have been invented by the French mathematician D'Alembert. This system enjoins an increase of one after a loss and a decrease of one after a gain. Thus the progression would be 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 for a series of five losses, followed by 6, 5, 4, 3, 2 for a series of five gains, which would give a net profit of 20 minus 15 equals 5. It would be easy to make up other cases. Unfortunately zero tells heavy against this system, which requires prolonged playing. The plan has been pronounced worthless by experts, chiefly because a favorable long run does not compensate for a subsequent unfavorable long run. If there are frequent changes and no long runs, the system may succeed.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Some one started plenty in this column by saying that she didn't want babies. Promptly the war was on, but not, as you might expect, in glorious defense of motherhood. There were, to be sure, numerous indorsements of that ancient and necessary institution. But, startling as it may seem, there were quite as many wives who think it's the bunk and refuse to include Dimpled Darlings in their budget.

What's more, they won't be shushed. They protest, noisily, that they're exactly as normal as other females and quite as useful. Indeed, they go even further. Several of them pin medals on themselves for NOT having babies, even when they want them! F'instance—

"SHOW ME ONE GOOD REASON WHY A BABY SHOULD BE BORN!" demands Mrs. A. B. S., of Haverhill, Mass. And this in spite of the fact that she has a little daughter of five, whom she adores.

"For years," she writes, "I've craved more children AND AS CONSTANTLY PRAYED FOR STRENGTH TO ABSTAIN FROM HAVING THEM. For I consider having children one of the most selfish forms of personal gratification. What is there so selfish about having a child? For whose sake do we have it? Why not tell the truth—we have it for our own. BIRTH IS NO GIFT TO A CHILD . . . IT IS CRUEL AND COWARDLY AND SELFISH TO INFLICT LIFE UPON A CHILD TO GRATIFY OUR OWN SELFISH EMOTIONS. When you can give me one reason why a child should be born . . . outside of the pleasure or profit which that new life gives to the family or society at large . . . one reason that affects the child itself, then and then only will I further populate the world." Mrs. A. B. S.

One reason why a child should be born? I don't need to give you that answer, lady. Look to history . . . millions of years of human history. For all those millions of years, people have had birth thrust upon them. And, barring the mentally unbalanced, there never yet was one that didn't hang on to the gift and raise Cain if anyone tried to take it from him.

Take yourself for example. Suppose a big truck were roaring down upon you—would you duck? I'll say you would! You'd duck to save your life. And you'd want to save your life because, no matter what life has cost, you love it and consider it worth while. Nor is this love-of-life a conscious and deliberate attitude. It was born with you. Tiny, helpless, dumb, practically blind, you entered the world. Yet from your first gasp you wanted life, loved life, demanded it at any price.

Look again at history. See what birth meant to some men and women. Tuberculosis to Robert Louis Stevenson. Rotting isolation to Father Damien on his leper's isle. Perpetual darkness and silence to Helen Keller. Humiliation, discouragement, loneliness, murder to Lincoln. The firing squad to Edith Cavell. Death in the jungle to Livingstone. Birth meant inexpressible pain and difficulty to each one of these, and, because of that, you would have denied it to them. But birth also meant noble dreams, gallant adventures, visions of beauty—a challenge that lifted them out of all their human misery and made them walk their little span like gods. Was life worth while to them? By every act of their lives they proved it was!

Why should a child be born? That's why. Because the child itself, if it had any say in the matter, would want to be born. Because whatever you may think about its right to birth, whatever society may feel about the value of its life, to the child itself LIFE IS THE INCOMPARABLY PRECIOUS ADVENTURE.

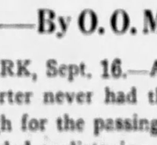
SECTION 4. The Selection of Characters Which are Useless to the Species.

It is often to be noted that some adaptation is extremely well developed in one animal and totally absent in related animals living under the same conditions. One butterfly exhibits an amazingly close resemblance to its background, while another that would seem to stand in equal need of such protection is without it altogether.

One flower (like the common spotted orchid), possesses elaborate devices for securing cross-fertilization; another (like the bee-orchid) modifies the same mechanism to ensure self-fertilization. Often, too, the adaptation seems more delicate than we should imagine necessary.



H. G. Wells

From such facts it has not infrequently been argued either that apparent adaptations are really not adaptations at all, since their absence in other species shows them easily dispensed with, and therefore, presumably not at all a matter of life or death; or on the other hand, that though they may be useful, selection plays no part in their origin, but that some inherent tendency to particular adaptations exist in some species, but is lacking in others.

But such arrangements are not cogent. Take a butterfly as example. The struggle for existence is at its hardest during its caterpillar and chrysalis stages; and in any case a limit is soon set to the numbers of the species by its food-plant; however many eggs may be laid, there is subsistence only for a limited number of caterpillars.

Thus variations which merely help or hinder the survival of the butterfly stage itself can have no effect on the future of the race, unless they actually prevent all, or almost all, the butterflies from reproducing. Even if two adults survive where only one survived before, and twice as many eggs are successfully laid, no more than the fixed maximum of caterpillars can find food.

In the same way, a diminution in adult members, if not too extreme, will be compensated for by the survival of a greater proportion of the caterpillars that hatch; again, if the caterpillars are over-abundant, they fall a readier prey to ichneumons and other parasites, and vice versa.

The caterpillar stage acts as a buffer, taking up all minor fluctuations in the number of adults.

And yet it is perfectly possible for variations affecting the adult to be selected. If a variation crops up which gives its possessors greater immunity from attack by making them look more like a dangerous wasp or a nauseous butterfly, a larger proportion of these mimics than of the remainder will survive to reproduce their kind.

The caterpillars will be kept down to their maximum numbers, but there will be a greater proportion of those which inherit the genes for the mimicking resemblance. Thus, when the butterfly stage of the next generation is reached, there will be a greater proportion of mimics than in the last. And so the process will go on, generation after generation, until the better mimics have wholly replaced the worse; and it will be repeated every time that there arises a new mutation making for greater resemblance to the "model."

Yet the species as a whole will be neither worse nor better off than before. There has never been any danger of the race going under in the struggle against parasites or elements, or in the competition for food with other species; the struggle has been wholly within the species; it has concerned the survival of one variety in place of another, not that of the species as a whole.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A former newspaper columnist, who as a reporter never had the world in flames, recently crocheted a sigh for the passing of capable newspaper reporters. He sprinkled a glistening of tears through several pages of a national magazine.

Many swan songs are sung for the present day reporter with despairing moans for "the good old days." I belong to that remote era and would like to sob too, but the tears would be crocodilian. The modern newspaper story is 10 city blocks ahead of those of 20 years ago.

And that goes for the Sun in the days of Dana. The reporter today not only has a better style, a sprightlier perspective, but assembles facts more expertly. He also works under greater pressure and is more reliable. The hard drinking sciber is out like a light.

It is true old time reporters such as Will Irwin, Irvin Cobb, Albert Payson Terhune, Frank Ward O'Malley, Don Clarke and others have gone to bigger literary endeavors, bless them, but it is equally true reporters in the last ten years are doing even bigger things.

Fifty per cent of Broadway's successful plays, spectacular movies and talkies and current best selling novels are being written by men and women reporters only a few years ago. Two of the ablest theatrical producers and the head of the biggest film company are in this illustrious list.

School of journalism—those of us who began running copy may shrug all we like—are turning out a higher grade product, men and women with better educational equipment and worthier ideals. Too many of us in "the good old days" were more interested in loose Saturday nights than reporting.

The journalistic school cub knows more about the game when he yanks his first doorbell than the old time cub could learn in a year. The 25-year-old managing editor is no longer "the boy wonder" in the newspaper or magazine field, and I don't want to hear any more about it.

Newspaper work, however, had more of the exciting quality called romance than that today. Efficiency squeezed out the charm so ably glorified in tales by Richard Harding Davis. Save for Floyd Gibbons, no recent reporter suggests the swashbuckler. The modern crop would look perfectly at home at glass-topped desks, surrounded by adding machines.

A burly cop on a charger was keeping crowds back at the Fifth avenue corner while a parade passed. "Go ahead and get back!" he roared.

Last night for the first time in years, I heard a diner exclaim: "Shet that doah!" It originated in Negro settlements and its suddeness was so realistic you could almost hear the plink-plank of the banjo and stuff of bare feet. When a tasty dish was served in cabins it was a cry of delight—and to keep moochers out.

An American, living 30 years in China, returned to New York recently to remain. After a month he set off for the Orient again, having lived so long among Chinese servants he could no longer dress or undress himself.

A dozen times this morning a man popped out of an apartment hotel, across the way to scan the skies and hold out his hand for rain, although the sun was in effulgence. At his last appearance I said to my wife: "He has made up his mind it will rain." A half hour later New York was drenched with the heaviest torrent in years. All the conveniences in our block—including a human barometer.

Salad dressing is a recent important development of domestic science. A person who can trim a salad plate appetizingly and attractively gets on in the world. At a dinner last night was an alligator pear salad like something by Fragonard. The pears were a beach around a lake of aqua-marine dressing with birds carved of cheese looking into the lake. It was designed by a specialist who receives $12,000 a year and inspired the gentleman to shriek: "Shet that doah!"

It is too bad a salad designer cannot be hooked up on the radio. Still I have a lot of worrying to do before I can get around to that.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

To be slapped on the back and called a good fellow is the highest desire you have in life.

To gain this, your conception of popularity, you feel that you must spend money freely and be in for anything proposed.

Often you go beyond your means and take chances with your reputation in order to fulfill requirements of the role you wish to fill.

It is not unusual to wish to be well thought of.

Man likes to have friends, but some individuals are willing to pay too dear a price for friends and those who can be bought are not the most desirable kind.

When you feel that you must do what you know you should not do to gain or hold friends you are being unfair to yourself and to others most interested in you.

Real friends don't require any such sacrifice on your part.

The crowd that drops you because you will not exceed what you can afford to spend and because you will not engage in things you know you should not do are not worth cultivating as friends.

As a matter of fact the man who has a mind of his own and acts according to good judgment is always the man most highly respected.
